BIBLE SOCIETY.—According to announcement a meeting was held in the M. E. Church, Morven, on Monday evening for the purpose of organizing a sub-branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society. The chair was occupied by the pastor, Rev. S. A. Duprau, who opened the meeting with singing, prayer and reading a portion of scripture. He then explained the object of the meeting and introduced the speakers of the evening. Mr. Black, of Napanee, sec. of the Napanee branch, gave a brief but able account of the working of the society in this province, after which Mr. Bowerman, of Napanee Model School, delivered an eloquent address. He gave powerful arguments in proof of the authenticity of the Bible. He then referred to its influence in civilizing the human race and introducing comfort, prosperity and happiness instead of savage barbarity. Next he presented its claims upon the liberality of those who enjoy the blessings it affords. These gentlemen, by their eloquence and zeal, have succeeded in arousing an interest in the minds of those who heard them in the work of the Bible Society, which we trust will be productive of a hearty response when waited upon by the collectors. The following are the officers for the current year:—President, Rev. S. A. Duprau; Vice-President, Mr. S. B. Phillips; Sec.-Treas., Mr. T. B. German; Committee—Messrs. Ira Raymond, Samuel Bell, Silas Lake; Collectors—western district—Misses Alice Lake and Charlotte Robinson; Eastern district—Misses Ella Bell and Ida Vanslyck.

A by-law was then passed appointing pound-keepers and fence viewers for the year. Mr. Post moved, seconded by Mr. Vanalstine, that whereas A. C. Parks, late clerk of this municipality, did of his own motion and contrary to the usual custom with municipal councils, give an order on the treasurer of this municipality for the expenses of holding the last election, or, presented an account for the same in which he received pay for services that we consider he had a right to perform for the salary already voted him, therefore this council regrets that the said Clerk should have taken such a course, and resolves that in future the Clerk shall bring such accounts before the council and have them adjusted before payment is made. On the vote being taken Mr. Post and Mr. Vanalstine voted yea, and Mr. Carscallen and Mr. Hough nay. The Reeve decided in the affirmative and declared the motion carried. Mr. Vanalstine was appointed in conjunction with the road engineer to examine the bridge across Little Creek, near Mr. Brechenridge's, on the county road, and if necessary rebuild said bridge, and report at next meeting. The Council then adjourned till the last Monday in March at 10 a.m.

THE REEVESHIP.—In accordance with a notice for the purpose of nominating a person for Reeve of this place, the free and independent electors met on Friday last to name their man. Both the billiard and non-billiard party were sanguine of success. After calling the meeting to order, the returning officer stated in a brief speech the cause for which the people were called together. Dr. Aylsworth spoke with his usual force and fluency in favor of billiards, stating that the game was a scientific one and perfectly harmless one in itself, but that he did not think the billiard rooms should be unrestricted and thought the village council should pass a by-law to obviate the difficulty. He was followed by Mr. Stickney, who wished to see it out of the village. Mr. A. Caton was the next speaker. He said he believed it was a scientific game, that it was so scientific that it kept young men up till twelve and one o'clock in the morning. Dr. Aylsworth, in replying to Mr. Caton, accused that gentleman of ignorance for saying the game was not scientific. Mr. Caton replied that he just said it was scientific. All who heard Mr. Caton and who wished to be informed as to the true facts of the case must have been delighted with the able and cool manner in which he handled the subject. It is a well known fact to parties living in the vicinity of the billiard saloon that it is open to a very

—Presuming it is a long time since you heard from this place, I thought I would take the liberty of informing you of what is going on here.

—The last days of February caught cold, then relapsed into a blizzard, and expired on the night of the 29th. March is here cold and clear, which means that we are to have two winters in one year.

—The roads are very bad. Travelling is good on the ice, where our local sports occasionally indulge in a "hang-on" and where David takes the cake.

—We are to have a joint stock cheese factory, which is being built by Mr. Card, of this place.

—Our school house has been repaired and a few alterations made. The school is progressing favorably under the able tuition of Miss Neely.

—Social gatherings have been in order these long evenings, where music was furnished gratis by a couple of too-toos.

—Boys, keep your hands out of your pockets.
—Leap year—three in a cutter won't do.

—Hamburg is to have an oyster supper. Sill-ville, do thou likewise.

—Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Duprau preached to a full house.

—We are sadly in need of a church.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Robert and Miss Ida Asselstine are visiting friends in Moscow. Mr. Induceum, who has been visiting his uncle here,
Mr. A. Sharp, has returned home. Mr. Albert
Lucas, formerly of this place, is dangerously ill.
Mumps are the prevailing disorder.

Macdonald.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—I thought I would write you so that the many readers of your valuable paper may see that the good people of Macdonald are still living and patiently waiting to welcome the echoing of the various steamers which ply the waters of the beautiful Bay of Quinte at the opening of navigation.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Edward Rendell has moved from Prince Edward Co. and located once more in our midst on Mr. R. Baker's old homestead. . .
We very much regret to learn that Mr. Samuel Walmsley has moved from the neighborhood and located in North Adolphustown. . . Mr.
Wm. German is about to remove from our midst and locate north of Napance. . . Miss Ella Thompson, of Melrose, is visiting at Mr. R.
Dingman's. Leap year, Richard, be careful. . .
Miss Joyce, of Adolphustown, is visiting her uncle, Mr. Geo. Joyce. . . Our very efficient school teacher, Miss Connors, though the weather has not been very inviting, has been at her post every day to perform her work of instructing the youth. . . Mr. R. Dingman and Thomas McWain drove to Belleville on Sunday morning and returned at night. Short calls, Tommy.

—Owing to the ill health of Rev. Mr. Betts, we have been deprived to a certain extent of our regular appointments at Bethany, but Rev. I.O.
Mallory, of Deseronto, has kindly consented to come over and preach to the good people of Bethany Sunday evening next. A full attendance is requested.

Mr. McNeill, I take this opportunity of informing the Beaver correspondent from Macdonald that he was mistaken or could not have known anything about the council of North Fredericksburgh when he said, "That the council of North Fredericksburgh were sacking all the Tory officers." Now, Mr. Editor, I would like to inform that correspondent that the council did not, nor have not, sacked Tory officers, and I don't think that they intend to sack Tory officers, but that correspondent should have judgment enough to know that when an officer's time has expired and some one been appointed to fill the vacancy of such office, that said officer is not sacked, but

THE REEVESHIP.—In accordance with a notice for the purpose of nominating a person for Reeve of this place, the free and independent electors met on Friday last to name their man.
Both the billiard and non-billiard party were sanguine of success. After calling the meeting to order, the returning officer stated in a brief speech the cause for which the people were called together. Dr. Aylsworth spoke with his usual force and fluency in favor of billiards, stating that the game was a scientific one and perfectly harmless one in itself, but that he did not think the billiard rooms should be unrestricted and thought the village council should pass a by-law to obviate the difficulty. He was followed by Mr. Stickney, who wished to see it out of the village. Mr. A. Caton was the next speaker. He said he believed it was a scientific game, that it was so scientific that it kept young men up till twelve and one o'clock in the morning. Dr. Aylsworth, in replying to Mr.
Caton, accused that gentleman of ignorance for saying the game was not scientific. Mr. Caton replied that he just said it was scientific. All who heard Mr. Caton and who wished to be informed as to the true facts of the case must have been delighted with the able and cool manner in which he handled the subject. It is a well known fact to parties living in the vicinity of the billiard saloon that it is open to a very late hour and is visited by those nocturnal beings
"who make night hideous."

THE REEVE.—To the joy of the whole village
J. D. Ham, Esq., was prevailed on to accept the office by acclamation. Mr. Ham stated if there was a person against him he would not accept, but for the sake of reconciling parties he did so. Mr. Ham will make an able and judicious Reeve. Every one feels satisfied with the appointment. We have the "right man in the right place." Mr. Ham in accepting the office has done honor to Newburgh, and the people have shown their good sense and appreciation of his willingness to serve them in the unanimous manner in which they have elected him to the Reeveship. Mr. Ham is a man who has an interest in the welfare of this place second to no other man, and in seeing that his own rights are protected he will guard the rights of others. He has an extensive and practical business education which cannot fail to make him
one of the foremost members of the County Council. When the proper time comes Mr.
Ham's great wit and will will do him reference to the billiard question what is right, but it is in no way likely that the proprietor of it will obtain a license from the Council again for the nominal sum of $10.

LITERARY SOCIETY.—Last Friday evening the Literary Society was treated to a lecture on "Light" by Mr. F. Miller, B.A. In a concise way
Mr. Miller stated the two great theories held by philosophers, the mode of finding the rate at which light travels and the sources of light, but said that the cause of the light of the sun was unknown. He illustrated several important points in optics by means of drawings, and finally wound up by answering a number of questions proposed by the audience. Mr. Miller is evidently well acquainted with the subject.

Division Court.—On Monday last His Honor
Judge Wilkinson spent some time in settling up some accounts of long standing amongst some people of Newburgh and vicinity.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS AT BATH.

A few weeks ago some of the young people of this place met and organized a Dramatic Club, with Mr. E. G. Ferren as manager and Mr. A. Martyn as Sec. Treas. On the evening of the 26th ult. the club played the fairy tale drama, "Cinderella, or the Glass Slipper," in the town hall. The magnificent display on the stage surpassed anything ever seen in this place. The hall was filled at an early hour, and the curtain rose at eight, disclosing the stage, which was tastefully furnished and arranged. Following is a list of the dramatis personae:—

Lord Easygoing, an old man, childish and henpecked.....	Mr. W. Fraser.
Lady Disdain, his wife.....	Mrs. E. G. Ferren.
Cinderella, his daughter.....	Miss May Wemp.
Charlotte.....	Miss Hogle.
Amabelle.....	Lady Disdain's daughters, Mrs. Kennedy.
Prince Amour.....	Mr. J. M. Wemp.
Antasha, Cinderella's godmother, an old witch.....	Mrs. T. Seward.
Prince Amour's parents.....	Mr. A. Martyn.
Lord Tim, the royal herald.....	Miss Edna Hogle.
Barbours, Mrs. Man Robinson, Miss Mata Roblin, and Messrs. C. Cummins, C. Wemp, Max Robinson and Allan Wemp.	Mr. T. A. Seward.

Miss Mary Wemp as Cinderella in scene I. appeared on the stage in a loose tattered dress of print, patched in various places, and with a cotton kerchief covering her hair. In scene III. as a foreign princess she excited the admiration of all by the naturalness and graceful ease with which she enacted her part. The transformation from "drudge" to "princess" was indeed complete. The tattered dress disappeared in an instant when touched by the fairy wand, and instead was seen a lovely ball-dress of white tissue, with ample trailing draperies. Her face was concealed by a veil fastened to a coronet of pearls and a necklace.

The part of Lady Disdain was admirably sustained by Mrs. E. Gantier Ferren, who certainly possesses dramatic talent of a high order. In the first scene she appeared richly attired in garnet satin, trimmed with pompons and marabout feathers, and in lace cap. Ornaments, rubies. In scene III. at Prince Amour's ball, she was elegantly dressed in a mauve silk petticoat, with pink bodice, train beautifully trimmed with silver lace and crescents. Head-dress of plumes. Silver ornaments.

Miss Annie Hogle, as the daughter of Lady Disdain, appeared in scene I. in a dress of fine texture and color, lace head-dress and golden ornaments. In scene III. in her costume of rich green brocade satin with train lavishly trimmed with stars of burnished gold, she presented an exceedingly handsome and dignified appearance.

The other daughter of Lady Disdain was personated by Mrs. Alex. Kennedy, who undoubtedly enacted her part with great success. In scene I. she was dressed in a handsome black silk skirt, black velvet bodice, lace collar, lace cap and golden ornaments. At the ball, Mrs. Kennedy appeared in a white silk petticoat with train.

—The Indian troubles in the North-West have been quelled. Yellow Calf has surrendered.

—Mr. W. R. Climie, editor of the Bowmanville Sun, and his wife were presented yesterday evening on the occasion of their china wedding anniversary with a handsome dinner set of 110 pieces and several other valuable articles.

—Rev. G. W. Lane, of Halifax, who recently paid a fine of $200 for performing a marriage ceremony without the production of a license by the couple, has been presented by friends with a purse of $945.

—Mr. Boyle, of Quebec city, father of a large family, was instantly killed yesterday by a kick from his horse. He had just returned from attending mass.

—Frederick T. Bradley, the defaulting ex-collector of customs at Emerson, Man., died last evening.

—A bill was introduced by Mr. Curran in the House of Commons at Ottawa recently to re-arrange the debt and raise capital for the purpose of doubling the Grand Trunk railway track from Toronto to Montreal.

—A fire broke out this morning in the apartments of Cornelius Van Piper, Stanton-street, New York. Van Piper and his three children were burned to death. Mrs. Van Piper jumped from a third-storey window and was killed.

FRIDAY, FEB. 29.

—A sleigh containing five persons was struck by a Midland Railway engine to-day while crossing the track 9 miles from Peterborough. Miss Reid, of Ashburnham, was killed and the others were slightly hurt.

—This morning the Pullman and passenger coaches on the G. T. R. fast express were thrown from the track near Prescott. Both cars were dragged 20 feet when the coupling broke and the derailed cars were turned over. Several of the passengers were injured. The cause of the accident was a broken rail.

—A discharged employee named Chave of a convent near Marseilles killed the Lady Superior with a revolver and mortally wounded her companion to-day.

—Wm. Moore, colored, was hanged at Frank- ill, La., to-day for the murder of a Chinaman last spring. Half a minute after the trap was sprung it was ascertained that the rope was too long and that the feet of the culprit were upon the floor. He was raised to the platform and the rope shortened.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1.

—Joseph Beach shot and killed his wife and himself at New Hartford, Dakota, this morning. The trouble arose over the possession of one of their children.

—A half-witted youth of Sandwich confesses to having burned four buildings in that town.

—The steamer Juliet was burned at Halifax to-day. It is thought she was laden with oil cake or petroleum.

Fifteen thousand dollars were found concealed in the bed and sewed in the dresses of an old lady who has just died at Essex Centre, Ont.

A roll of American cloth containing 45 packages of dynamite has been discovered in London, Eng.

The snow storm of yesterday has caused much damage in Eastern Canada. Many private houses along the St. Lawrence were almost buried in snow and the occupants had to make their exit through attic windows. In some places there are over 12 feet of snow.

with ample trailing draperies. Her face was concealed by a veil fastened to a coronet of pearls. Pearl necklace.

The part of Lady Disdain was admirably sustained by Mrs. E. Gaudier Ferren, who certainly possesses dramatic talent of a high order. In the first scene she appeared richly attired in garnet satin, trimmed with pompons and marabout feathers, and in lace cap. Ornaments, rubies. In scene III., at Prince Amour's ball, she was elegantly dressed in a mauve silk petticoat, with pink bodice, train beautifully trimmed with silver lace and crescents. Head-dress of plumes. Silver ornaments.

Miss Annie Hogle, as the daughter of Lady Disdain, appeared in scene I. in a dress of fine texture and color, lace head-dress and golden ornaments. In scene III. in her costume of rich green brocade satin with train lavishly trimmed with stars of burnished gold, she presented an exceedingly handsome and dignified appearance.

The other daughter of Lady Disdain was personated by Mrs. Alex. Kennedy, who undoubtedly enacted her part with great success. In scene I. she was dressed in a handsome black silk skirt, black velvet bodice, lace collar, lace cap and golden ornaments. At the ball, Mrs. Kennedy appeared in a blue silk petticoat with train, pale blue bodice, with white satin vest, trimmed with old lace and small golden stars; long white silk gloves, with powdered hair, gold and diamond ornaments.

Great credit is due Mrs. T. A. Seaward for the charming manner in which she played the fairy. Her costume, though differing from the rest, as a fairy costume should, was very appropriate. The character was well sustained throughout, and the fairy at the prince's ball attracted considerable attention.

Miss Edna Hogle, the queen, was handsomely dressed in terra cotta silk, trimmed with swan's down. Over this was thrown a mantle of pink brocade silk, trimmed with swan's down. She wore a silver crown set with turquoise and garnets, fastened to which was a veil of tulle. In her role she could hardly be surpassed. The dignity, self possession and unassuming grace which marked every movement proved that she was well fitted for the part she enacted. The Queen seated upon a high throne beside the King, in the third and fourth scenes, with the courtiers bowing before them and conversing gayly in groups, made a picture of splendor and beauty which will not soon be forgotten.

Mrs. Max Robinson, lady-in-waiting on the Queen, was handsomely attired in a black brocade satin petticoat with train, pale pink brocade satin bodice, very neatly and prettily trimmed with exquisite, which was very becoming. Ornaments, old gold and pearls.

Miss Mata Roblin was beautifully dressed in myrtle-green brocade satin, pink chenille fichu and roses. Gold ornaments.

The gentlemen exhibited considerable dramatic talent. To see the highly creditable manner in which Messrs. Wemp, Fraser and Seaward performed a critical observer would conclude that they were professionals. Mr. J. J. Wemp as the ardent and chivalrous Prince Amour made a decided hit. Lord Easy-going and Bully Tin were also well personated by Mr. Fraser and Mr. Seaward, and their appearance on the stage was a signal for long-continued applause.

The entertainment concluded with an amusing farce, "The Phantom," in which the following persons took part—Mrs. Max Robinson, Miss Mata Roblin, and Messrs. Max Robinson, A. Wemp and G. Bully.

The Dramatic Club of Bath later is to give an entertainment in St. John's Town Hall Tuesday evening, 8th inst.

A SPORTSMAN'S DEFENCE.

[To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.]

SIR—Allow me through you to express my reply to an article written by a Mr. C. Scanlin in the Napanee News of Dec. 25th, 1888. This untruthful imputation arrived here Nov. 25th, a perfect stranger, and wanted to accompany me on my annual hunt and as I had made no arrangement previously, and had heard of Mr. C.'s character the night he arrived from a young man coming from his own township, who pronounced him the meanest and most miserly man in the County; such an introduction was quite sufficient. He claimed to be one of the party, but in reality he was an intruder. He acknowledges that he does not belong to any hunting club, therefore such a man is not worthy to be called a sportsman.

He also states that he could not recommend any person to come to me for the pleasure of

Hard to Believe.

It is hard to believe that a man was cured of a kidney disease after his body was swollen as big as a barrel and he had been given up as incurable and lay at death's door. Yet such a cure was accomplished by Kidney-Wort in the person of M. M. Bevereaux of Ionia, Mich., who says: "After thirteen of the best doctors in Detroit had given me up, I was cured by Kidney-Wort. I want every one to know what a boon it is."

The gentlemen exhibited considerable dramatic talent. To see the highly creditable manner in which Messrs. Wemp, Fraser and Seaward performed a critical observer would conclude that they were professionals. Mr. J. M. Wemp
as the ardent and chivalrous Prince Armande
a decided hit. Lord Easygoing and Bully Tin were also well personated by Mr. Fraser and Mr.
Seaward, and their appearance on the stage was a signal for long-continued applause.

The entertainment concluded with an amusing farce, "The Phantom," in which the following persons took part:—Mrs. Max Robinson, Miss Mata Robinson, and Messrs. Max Robinson, A.
Wemp and G. Hall.

A SPORTSMAN'S DEFENCE.

[To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.]

SIR.—Allowing through your columns to reply to an article written by a Mr. C. Scanlin in the Northern Echo of Dec. 19th, 1881. This untruth-ful intruder arrived here Nov. 21st, a perfect stranger, and wanted to accompany me on my annual hunt; and as I had made my arrangements previously, and had heard of Mr. C.'s character the night he arrived from a young man hailing from his own township, who pronounced him the meanest and most miserly man in the County; such an introduction was quite sufficient. He claimed to be one of the party, but in reality he was an intruder. He acknowledges that he does not belong to any hunting club, therefore such a man is not worthy to be called a sportsman.

He also states that he could not recommend any person to come to me for the pleasure of sport. I do not want such a man's recommendation, as he is not truthful in his attempt to mislead the public by writing such fabrications which appear to be his natural propensity, for he asserts that he killed a bear and a deer,
which the accompanying letter, signed by parties who were present, emphatically contradicts.
I am also prepared to meet this person any time or place and to prove to the public, by his own friends, his false assertions which were so little called for through the press. Mr. C. S., as a marksman, is a rank failure, he having one day fired five times at a deer under the most favorable circumstances without effect, as can be proved by the party that were present, and which he also acknowledged. This so humiliated him that he left in disgust and gave his Winchester rifle in charge of a friend likely to make better use of it, saying at the same time he never would return.

Any one wanting a Winchester rifle might find it to their advantage to correspond with Charles Scanlin, Marysville P. O.

Again, in referring to Mr. C. S.'s penuriousness, Mr. Potter, of this village, can bear testimony to his ungentlemanly behaviour towards him when here, and wishes to make it known.

And now, in conclusion, I would advise Mr.
C. S. for the future not to romance or try to take to himself credit which belongs to others.

Respectfully,
T. BLAKE.

Campbellford, Feb. 18, 1882.

COPY OF LETTER ABOVE REFERRED TO.
Mathew Camp, Jan. 9, 1882.

T. BLAKE, Esq.—
Dear Sir.—Your letter has just come to hand,
in which you expressed a wish that I would make a statement of the particulars of the result of our hunt at Yake's Lake last fall. Well, sir, to begin, the party consisted of yourself as captain, John Drain, A. Sharp, J. Marsden and C. Armstrong. In three days we killed five deer and one bear, three of the deer being shot by yourself, one by A. Sharp and one by C. Armstrong. In killing the bear we were annoyed by a greenhorn by the name of Scanlin who came in the day before on a deer with a rifle and a small jug of whiskey. He asked to be allowed to see the bear killed, the bear having been previously found in a den. As soon as the bear came out, this Scanlin commenced firing, and either through fear or excitement came near shooting two of the party. However, sir, you soon fixed his bearship.

We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that the above statement is in every way correct.

CHARLES ARMSTRONG.
JOHN DRAIN.
ALEXANDER SHARP.

A gentleman, who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and opportunities they possessed sheep. It is true they did not great plains that exist in the portion of Canada and the United States where one person could keep a thousand sheep, and where the securing hay was very light. had other and perhaps greater advantages. The production of wool and mutton was alike profitable. There was a market for early lambs. The aggregate, a large amount of land was unfit for general tillage. was rough, stony or broken, considerable portion of it was parted with trees and bushes. It was difficult to mow as to plough it. produced a great variety of clover grasses, and portions of it would grow good crops of oats, rye, barley, corn, and roots. Materials for protection for sheep were abundant. Streams and springs of water were everywhere within reach of the flocks. There were no animals or dogs. The majority could keep a hundred sheep without additional expense. What is true of the provinces is also true of the United States where very few sheep are kept. The example of Vermont farmers in respect to keeping sheep, deserves to be followed by the farmers of the south who have large portions of land suited to general tillage. They largely increase their revenue by greatly increasing their labor, and a flock of sheep.

Agriculture in Japan

During recent years agriculture made much progress in Japan. The area of land under cultivation is comparatively small. Four-fifths of the population is engaged in agriculture, and in few countries does so extensive a variety of products grow. Rice still continues to be the staple product, and on it the people depend for their subsistence. A strange perversion of the Japanese is that they eat fruits when green, ripe fruit being considered unfit for use. There are no raised ridges of earth in Japan, the great need of the country is stock, and it is probable that long stock raising will receive more attention than it has in the past.

Miss Flood Jilts a Fortune Lord.

Miss Jennie Flood, the heiress, who is reported by the paper to be engaged to a British nobleman in this city, and emphatically reports. It is understood, too, that Miss Flood denies that she was jilted by a fortune lord, but claims the match was broken off by mutual consent. Miss Flood is accomplished and amiable, and is esteemed by all who know her. She possesses in her own right $2,000,000 of Government bonds, presented to her on her recent birthday.

The English noble referred to in the London paper is believed to be Lord Beaumont, who was in San Francisco long since. It is understood that the young noble made overtures for the wealthy young heiress, and was offered a dowry of $5,000,000, but Miss Flood indignantly refused. Tribune.

The Best Bacon.

The best bacon is made from pigs which will not weigh more than 125 pounds when dressed. The rashers or stripes for the bacon are cut lengthwise of the pig and about half of the sides are used. The portion next the backbone is fatter and lacks in muscle and is not so good on this account. When bacon is made from small pigs—those weighing less than 100 pounds—the whole of the sides are used. Red and black Berkshire hogs make the best bacon because they have the largest proportion of lean meat. Six pounds of salt and four ounces of saltpetre should be used for 100 pounds of meat. Five pounds of brown sugar may also be used, or two quarts of molasses. If the bacon is cured in a barrel, the salt, saltpetre and sweetening should be mixed and a portion sprinkled on the bottom of the barrel and some also between the layers of meat and on the top, and water enough, after the meat is packed closely, put on to cover it. In a month the meat will be ready to smoke. Too much smoke will color the meat and give it a rank taste. Another way to cure bacon is to rub the above mixture on the flesh side of the stripe of bacon and then pile it up one piece above another, and let the mixture strike in. After three days rub and pile up as before. A week after rub again and pile it up, putting the flesh side up every time. The mixture should be divided in three equal parts, to provide for the several rubbings. At the end of a month the meat will be ready for smoking, or before if the salt has all struck in and the surface has become comparatively dry, which is an indication. After smoking, the rashers should be sewed up in bags of cotton cloth and hung up in a dry, dark place. If the bags are whitewashed on the outside all the better, and this will keep the worms out.

Places for Raising Sheep

Prof. Brown, of the Agricultural College at Guelph, Ont., recently visited portions of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and took occasion to inform the farmer that they did not improve the opportunities they possessed for raising sheep. It is true they did not have the great plains that exist in the western portion of Canada and the United States, where one person could keep several thousand sheep, and where the labor of securing hay was very light. But they had other and perhaps greater advantages. The production of wool and mutton were alike profitable. There was an excellent market for early lambs. There was, in the aggregate, a large amount of land that was unfit for general tillage. Much of it

THE IRON HORSE IN JAPAN.

Peculiarities of Railroad in the Land of the Rising Sun.

A trip from Yokohama to Tokio serves to elicit some interesting details of Japanese railroading, writes a correspondent from the latter city. Entering the spacious stone depot at Yokohama, the traveller finds separate waiting rooms for the various classes of patronage, with seats provided in the first and second-class apartments. Three or four hundred natives are crowding around the third-class ticket office, and it is wonderful in how short a time their wants are attended to. The windows open only a few minutes before train time, and, according to rule of the government, are closed from two to five minutes before the departure of the train, in order to secure punctuality.

Having purchased your ticket, you pass through the gate, where some one punches the ticket, and enter one of the cars. These cars are not wholly English, nor yet wholly American. In fact, there are all sorts of arrangements. Some are autotypes of the American street car, with tiny platforms at either end, and seats arranged parallel with the direction of the train. But the following general arrangement is the common one: The first class cars have the English compartment system, with seats upholstered in leather; the second-class have full length seats, with front and rear platforms, and the third-class have wooden seats, arranged according to the American plan, but are provided with side doors, sometimes as many as six to a car. The awkwardness of this mixture of styles is apparent when it is stated that all those doors have to be opened and closed successively upon the arrival or departure of a train from any depot, and that by one, or at most two, trainmen.

All the train officials are Japanese, and it is very seldom that you will find one that can speak even "pigeon English." They look quite attractive in their European uniform. When the railway was opened, all the positions in its gift were filled by foreigners, but to-day there are only half a dozen of these left, and it is doubtful whether they have come to stay or not. They occupy the most responsible positions, and it is quite impossible to get them to say anything about their business, owing to the superfluous restrictions imposed upon them by the government. Some of them are so "mum" that they will not answer the simplest question of fact. This illustrates the national secretiveness, which is still the policy of the country.

The ticket which you have purchased contains certain regulations printed upon it in six different languages, which is an illustration of the ceremoniousness cultivated by Japanese in every department of

It is true they did not have the great plains that exist in the western portion of Canada and the United States, where one person could keep several thousand sheep, and where the labor of securing hay was very light. But they had other and perhaps greater advantages. The production of wool and mutton were alike profitable. There was an excellent market for early lambs. There was, in the aggregate, a large amount of land that was unfit for general tillage. Much of it was rough, stony or broken, and a considerable portion of it was partially covered with trees and bushes. It was as difficult to mow as to plough it. Still it produced a great variety of clovers and grasses, and portions of it would produce good crops of oats, rye, barley, Indian corn, and roots. Materials for building protections for sheep were cheap and abundant. Streams and springs of pure water were everywhere within easy reach of the flocks. There were no wild animals or dogs. The majority of farmers could keep a hundred sheep with little additional expense. What is true of these provinces is also true of many of our States where very few sheep are kept. The example of Vermont farmers in respect to keeping sheep, deserves to be followed by the farmers of the west and south who have large portions of land not suited to general tillage. They could largely increase their revenues without greatly increasing their labor, by keeping a flock of sheep.

Agriculture in Japan.

During recent years agriculture has made much progress in Japan, although the area of land under cultivation is still comparatively small. Four-fifths of the population is engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in few countries could such an extensive variety of products be raised. Rice still continues to be the staple product, and on it the people mainly subsist. A strange perversion of taste among the Japanese is that they eat all their fruits when green, ripe fruit being considered unfit for use. There are no fences in Japan, raised ridges of earth taking their place. The great need of the country now is stock, and it is probable that before long stock raising will receive more attention than it has in the past.

They occupy the most responsible positions, and it is quite impossible to get them to say anything about their business, owing to the superfluous restrictions imposed upon them by the government. Some of them are so "mum" that they will not answer the simplest question of fact. This illustrates the national secretiveness, which is still the policy of the country.

The ticket which you have purchased contains certain regulations printed upon it in six different languages, which is an illustration of the ceremoniousness cultivated by Japanese in every department of the national service, as well as in the commonest matters of every day life. The depot bell rings, the conductor blows his mouth whistle (which is, in the absence of the bell ropes, the invariable method of communicating with the engine driver), the engine answers with a shrill scream, and the long train rumbles slowly out of the depot. Perhaps the engine is painted of a uniform green of the most brilliant hue. The speed is slow all the way, but clockwork was never more accurate, and a train behind time is a thing unheard of. The road is double-tracked, and the train equipped with every modern convenience except steam brakes. The gage is 3 feet and 6 inches, which is the standard throughout Japan. This is a cross between the standard gauge of 4 feet 8 inches and the narrow gauge of 3 feet which prevails in America. In Australia, I am told, where a great many hundred miles of railroad are in successful operation, an anomalous gauge of 5 feet and 3 inches has been adopted.

The rails rest upon iron "chairs" one yard apart according to the English system, which adds about one-third to the cost of building a railroad, and which is not found anywhere in America, I believe. The roadbed is superbly ballasted, and I suppose a very high rate of speed would be practicable; but the Japanese are content to travel the 18 miles in 50 minutes, and there are no trains which could fairly be called fast in America, much less England.

A determined case of suicide by drowning recently occurred off the Semaphore, Australia. A passenger on the steamer "Tiverton," named James Byrns, said "good-bye" to some fellow-passengers, and jumped overboard near the bell-buoy. A life-buoy was thrown to his assistance, but he made no effort to gain it. A boat was lowered and pulled to the spot where the man was last seen, but the body had disappeared. His luggage was overhauled, and as no money was found it is thought the rash act may have been committed owing to pecuniary difficulties.

He Was Mistaken.

A farmer approached a grain buyer at Manitow, Manitoba, recently, with a load of wheat. The buyer opened a bag and examined the cereal critically.

"Your wheat has been damaged by frost," said the buyer.

"Shouldn't wonder if it had," replied the farmer. "Blame it anyway. I never took so much pains with anything as I did with that wheat. I papered my granary, side it, shingled it, lined it—did everything but put a stove in it—and hanged if it don't seem as if it was bound to freeze. Why, old man, that wheat was harvested last year when there was no frost, and if it hadn't been for freezing in the granary, I guess it would have been all right."

The buyer retired behind a pile of lumber and kicked himself.

Miss Flood Jilts a Fortune - Hunting Lord.

Miss Jennie Flood, the California heiress, who is reported by a London paper to be engaged to a British peer, is in this city, and emphatically denies the report. It is understood, too, that Miss Flood denies that she was jilted by young Grant, but claims the match was broken off by mutual consent. Miss Flood is an accomplished and amiable lady, highly esteemed by all who know her. She possesses in her own right $2,500,000 in Government bonds, presented to her on a recent birthday.

The English noble referred to in the London paper is believed to be Lord Beaumont, who was in San Francisco not long since. It is understood that the young noble made overtures for the hand of the wealthy young heiress, but demanded a dowry of $5,000,000, which old man Flood indignantly refused.—Chicago Tribune.

His luggage was overhauled, and as no money was found it is thought the rash act may have been committed owing to pecuniary difficulties.

Another family tragedy has taken place in the Margarethen suburb of Vienna, a shoemaker having killed his son in a fit of passion. It appears that the father is an honest man, and generally respected in the neighborhood, while the son was most dissipated and universally disliked, owing to his brutality and roughness. Recently he returned home late at night and demanded money, which his father refused. He then became so violent that his father, in a moment of excitement, seized a stick and struck his son, injuring him so severely that he had to be transported to the hospital, where he died.

Important to Ruptured Persons.

The Excelsior Rupture treatment was introduced to the American people several years ago in such a manner as to completely secure the confidence of the whole nation. The mode of introduction was by furnishing the remedy to those afflicted with Hernia in any of its various forms and collecting no pay until a permanent cure was effected. In this way the treatment gained a world-wide reputation on its own merits, never failing to cure any reducible Hernia. The Company has at the solicitation of thousands placed the remedy on sale by all druggists, both wholesale and retail, in the United States, Canada and England. In this way bringing it within the reach of all classes at a trifling cost compared with the benefits which are derived from the use of the treatment. Ask your druggist for a free book on rupture, or send 6 cents for one to the Excelsior Rupture Cure M'fg Co., Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Flax-Seed.

The evidence produced to establish the superior claims of FLAX-SEED EMULSION COMPOUND as a remedy for Nervous exhaustion and all its symptoms is unquestionable. The large and increasing demand is almost entirely due to its own merits. We do not place it in competition with patent medicines or secret remedies, as we furnish the formula and can show that it consists of a superior combination of phosphorus, with the fat-producing properties of the Flax-Seed. During the past six months over FOUR THOUSAND BOTTLES have been dispensed in the city of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and county of St. Lawrence, where it is manufactured, and the universal verdict is that it is the best NERVE TONIC, BLOOD ENRICHEN, and PURIFIER ever produced. We solicit investigation as to the reputation of the remedy where ever it has been used.

*My Dear Sirs,—*Having tried your Fountain of Health for my complaints, I heartily urge all those suffering from Dizziness, Costiveness or Depression of Spirits, to give it a trial, as I have been completely cured with two bottles. I never enjoyed my breakfast, and being unable to sleep well, I grew very nervous. I am aged forty-five, and have suffered for over ten years.

Catarrh Cured.

*Gentlemen,—*I am forty years of age, and have been afflicted for the past ten years with Catarrh. I was recommended to try your Fountain of Health, which I am still using, and, although not perfectly cured, I am so much improved that I heartily recommend it any one suffering from the same disease. While taking it for the above disease, a severe pain, which I had in my side, has entirely left me.

Kidney Disease.

*Dear Sirs,—*I take pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received from the use of your Fountain of Health. For over nine years I have suffered from disease of the Kidneys, having a severe pain in the back a great deal of the time and a tenderness of the eye balls. No remedies that I have ever tried, and I have used no end of them, gave me relief, except your Fountain of Health, which has made me feel good. I have used two of your dollar bottles.

Yours sincerely,

MISCELLANEOUS.

"We never speak as we pass by" We have exchanged cooks.

There is a kingdom of love for every man and woman who is willing to accept its laws. The secret of winning these crowns is an open one, and he who runs may read it. Direct your thoughts from yourself and fix them upon others, study their weaknesses, and wants, and minister to them.

There is something curious about it all. Last year the grain crop was short in Canada, and all over America, and the supposition was that in consequence the markets would become brisk and prices stiffen up. That has not been the case, however. Now we are informed on good authority that at Liverpool, New York, Chicago, and other great grain centres there is a glut of grain, so that even storage room is becoming difficult to obtain. Has there been an overproduction in agriculture as well as in manufactures? It looks like it.

Wendell Phillips was a strong advocate of woman's rights, and he has left tangible evidence behind him that he was a firm believer in the doctrines that he preached in this respect. He was worth nearly quarter of a million dollars and he willed the whole of it unconditionally to his wife. That is woman's rights for you in good earnest. If he had a sensible wife, as he no doubt was convinced that he had, he made a very desirable will. Advocates of woman's rights should reduce their theories right down to practical every day life all the way through. The world would sooner have a race of real practical business women if more trusts were usually committed to their care.

Complaints are pretty loud that a great many of the visitors to Montreal during Carnival week were pretty well fleeced. The hotels were full and the drivers busy, and it is said that double prices, and sometimes even more, were charged for necessary accommodation. We hope that these accounts are exaggerated. It is an easy thing to get a bad reputation for extortion among travellers, and it is a hard thing to get rid of it again. Niagara Falls is a notable illustration of this fact. Of course travellers soon get shy of places of evil repute, and no doubt many will stay away from Montreal's next carnival because of the reports now being circulated. Toronto must be careful of its reputation in this respect in connection with its great gatherings.

Some of the United States papers show a good deal of indignation over the fact that when it becomes necessary to purchase sea-worthy ships to go north in connec-

start is made all round. How many years of debt and anxiety are often thus brought about, and how many business failures come in direct consequence? It would be hard to change the present custom for one of presents of a practical and sensible character, of such things as young beginners most need, but such a change would be an excellent one.

Two gentlemen from the Western States, travellers, were arrested in Montreal last week at the station, for carrying revolvers in their belts, Western fashion, and fined at the Police Court for the serious offence against the Canadian law for carrying deadly weapons. Some of the daily papers are trying to get up some indignation against thus pouncing on travellers. It may be the strangers did not know what our laws are about carrying revolvers round where they can be used with deadly effect on the first impulse. If they did not, they are very ignorant men, and will be apt to know better in future. Even if in this particular instance a hardship was done, it is quite probable that good will come out of it in the long run. It will do a good deal towards spreading the information in the West and South, that when men come to Canada, they had better leave their revolvers behind—that others do not carry such deadly weapons here, and therefore they need not do so,—in fact must not do so. The carrying of revolvers in belts, in railway trains, or anywhere else, is a dangerous and ugly custom, and it is due to all Canadian travellers, and all other travellers through Canada, that our authorities should stop the practice as efficiently as possible. A railway traveller armed with a whiskey flask and a loaded revolver, or either for that matter, is a dangerous passenger. The emptying of one is likely to rouse a spirit for emptying the other.

Toronto must be careful of its reputation in this respect in connection with its great gatherings.

Some of the United States papers show a good deal of indignation over the fact that when it becomes necessary to purchase sea-worthy ships to go north in connection with the Greely expedition, the Government make purchase of ships in Great Britain. Large sums have been paid out in that way, and yet it is pretty evident that the Washington authorities did a wise thing in making these foreign purchases. Ship building has been a protected industry in the United States for many years, but there is no denying the fact that the business has not had a healthy growth, for that or for some other good reason. Both the mercantile and the war navy of the United States is now in a much worse condition than for many a year before, and things are growing worse instead of better.

Every few days there are reports of fresh immigrant arrivals from Great Britain, and as most of them are dependent on work at once for their maintenance, they have to be provided for. It is painfully evident that for some time to come there will not probably be sufficient work for all our present labouring population. The question of increased immigration, of the laboring class especially, must be faced soon, and the sooner the better. There is no use of encouraging labourers to seek homes in Canada when we have no labor for them. There is no reason why we should encourage men and women to come here and then sustain them out of the hard earnings of the tax payers, because they cannot just now earn for themselves, even though quite willing to labor. Probably there never was a more favorable time for farmers, with some capital, to come here; but such is certainly not the case as regards either mechanics or mere laborers.

Years ago a great deal was said about the "Chinese Wall" and the exclusiveness of that country against "outside barbarians." Times are certainly changing and already it is becoming more difficult for the Chinese to obtain an entrance in the United States than for a citizen of

The new mother was bitterly lamenting that her first-born was cross-eyed, and the father, after looking at the baby for a second, said, encouragingly: "Never mind, Martha. If he's cross-eyed he'll never be a masher. There's some consolation in that."

Years ago a great deal was said about the "Chinese Wall" and the exclusiveness of that country against "outside barbarians." Times are certainly changing and already it is becoming more difficult for the Chinese to obtain an entrance in the United States than for a citizen of the latter country to enter China. The cry of certain classes, for years, has been "the Chinese must go," and both law and brute force has been pretty freely applied to enforce their exclusion. A bill has recently been reported in the Senate at Washington to further amend the law in regard to the admission of Chinese emigrants. The Philadelphia American says of it that it substantially creates an elaborate passport system, under the supervision of our consuls abroad and our Government officials at home. Every Chinaman who goes back to his native country is debarred from returning unless he satisfies an American consul in China that he has been already a resident of the United States. The law also provides for the summary arrest and return of those landing in America contrary to law. Where is the Chinese wall located now?

In many instances the mistaken kindness of real friends turns out an absolute cruelty for many years, if not for all after life. Is not this very frequently the case in regard to the kind of wedding presents given? A young lady, for example, very popular among her friends is about being married and there pour into her scores of rich and valuable presents of plate, and china, and fancy parlor ornaments purchased almost regardless of expense. In a large proportion of instances such presentations turn out a positive injury instead of the source of pleasure they are intended. How out of place such things would look in a house furnished as plainly as the means of most young beginners would easily pay for. Of course the temptation of an ambitious young husband is to provide other things somewhat in keeping and so he goes considerably beyond his means, and so an extravagant act-drop should be lowered. All the men will rush out by force of habit, and the women will sit still, as usual in such cases, and a panic will be prevented. This suggestion is freely offered for what it is worth. It is not patented.

"Humph!" ejaculated a husband, as he noticed the "ladies' corner" of his family paper, "they may confine them to one corner of a newspaper, but at home the whole business isn't big enough for them." He had been trying to find an old pair of pantaloons, and every closet, nook, and corner that he looked into bulged with feminine draperies.

Curious Growth on a Boy's Ears.

A colored boy from Virginia, 15 years of age, recently presented himself at the Maryland University hospital to have an operation performed for a curious formation on his ears. The growth is known as keloid, a kind of connective tissue tumor, covers the ears almost entirely, giving him the appearance of having elephant's ears. The one on the right ear measured eight inches across and twenty-five inches in circumference. The one on the left ear was almost six inches across. The weight of both tumors when removed was three pounds six ounces. One has been growing since the boy was 4 years old, and has been cut off three times; the other has been forming six months. They were hard, fibrous masses. The formations are said to occur more frequently on the ear than elsewhere on the body, and to be more common among colored persons than among the whites. They are not malignant and not cancerous. The cause of such growth is not definitely known. The surgeon was able to save a good portion of each ear. They were successfully removed by cautery, and the patient is doing well. He came on in the summer for treatment, but it was deemed best to put off the operation till winter. His physician is with him and his health is good. There are two similar formations on his breast, but it is thought that those will pass away as he grows older. The boy has suffered no pain in consequence of his deformities.—Baltimore American.

"Now, Amy, I will teach water the pots," Mrs. Clark said. "The water, you see, has been in the flower-room all night, its temperature. That draught from the well would be much and even as it is I shall add water to take the chill off. It is very sensitive to a sudden change of cold water. No, don't pour pots from that pitcher. They will not fall so, and as Webb says, imitate nature. This water a fine rose will enable you to water them slowly, and the soil can moisture naturally and equate plants need water much as food, regularly, often, and not at a time. Let this surface of pots be your guide. It should be perfectly dry, and still less sodden with moisture; nor should the plants ever stand in the saucers of pots, unless the plants are like this calla lily. You will learn to treat each plant according to its nature. The amount of water which that cactus would kill this heath, and the heath needed by the heath would kill that cactus over there."

Here was a fix, me a hundred feet from the rear of my train, expected to stop No. 20, and her a-comin' down the grade and round the curve, and my lantern out! Now I tell you I did some pretty quick think- ing then. I hadn't time to get back to the train, get another lantern, and get far enough to stop her. Couldn't strike a match in that wind, certain, and for a second or two I didn't know what to do. Then it came to me like a flash, and I didn't hustle? ## Hygienic Cooking—How to do It.

STEAMED GRAINS.—The table below gives the proportions of grain and water by measurement, and the time required for cooking in a closed steamer. (A closed steamer, is one that admits the steam through flues in the side or elsewhere, and not through holes in the bottom.) Some like these grains cooked quite dry, and others prefer them very moist. If the proportions here given do not suit the taste, it will be an easy matter to correct them, after a single trial. In steaming, always keep the water at a fast boil; and dish the very moment you lift the steam- er from the fire, else the water will col- lect.

GRAIN.		WATER.	TIME.
Rice.....	1 cup	3½ cups	½ hour.
Cracked Wheat.....	1 "	4½ "	3 hours.
Rolled or Pearl Wheat.....	1 "	4 "	3 "
Pearl Barley.....	1 "	3 "	3½ "
Roll'd or Crush'd Bar'l'y	1 "	3 "	3 "
Coarse Hominy.....	1 "	4 "	4 "
Fine Hominy.....	1 "	3½ "	4 "
Sam-p.....	1 "	4½ "	2½ "
Oatmeal.....	1 "	4 "	2 "
Groats.....	1 "	4 "	2 "
Rolled Oats.....	1 "	4 "	2 "

If you have not a steamer, cook the above grains in a farina kettle, which is a double boiler, or one vessel within an- other, the outer one containing water that is boiling. Grains cooked in this ket- tle (or in a covered tin bucket set in a pot of boiling water) require a longer time by about one-third, than if done in a closed steamer; hominy and pearl barley, for instance, would need all of five hours. The time can be shortened, however, by soaking (covered) over night, and cooking in the same water; if soaked, they will steam in a farina-kettle, in about the same time as that given in the table. But the flavor is rather better if the soaking is dispensed with. These grains are some- times cooked in a stone or earthen crock, or even in an iron pot, on the back of the stove; the fire must be slow or they will scorch.

CANNELON OF BEEF.—Chop half a pound of lean cocked beef fine; rub smooth in a mortar half a pound of raw fat bacon, or ham fat; grate the yellow rind of one lemon, mix all these ingredients thorough- ly, press them together in form of a roll, wrap them well in buttered paper, and bake it for twenty minutes in a moderate oven. When it is done, remove the paper without breaking the roll, and serve it either on a bed of parsley or lettuce, or with half a pint of brown sauce or meat gravy.

MOCK TERRAPIN.—Half a calf's liver; season and fry brown. Hash it, not very fine, dust thickly with flour, a teaspoon of mixed mustard, as much cayenne pep- per as will lie on half a dime, two hard eggs chopped fine, a lump of butter the size of an egg, a teacup of water. Let it boil together a minute or two. Cold veal will do if liver is not liked.

A Talk About House-Plants.

"A plant breathes as truly as you do, only, unlike yourself, it has indefinite thousands of mouths. There is one leaf on which there are over 150,000. They are called stomata, or breathing pores, and are on both sides of the leaf in most plants, but usually are in far greater abundance on the lower side. The plant draws its food from the air and soil—from the latter in liquid form—and this substance must be concentrated and assimilated. These little pores introduce the vital atmosphere through the air passages of the plant, which correspond in a certain sense to the throat and lungs of an animal. You would be sadly off if you couldn't breathe ; these plants would fare no better. Therefore we must do artificially what the rain does out-of-doors—wash away the accumulated dust, so that respiration may be unimpeded. Moreover, these little pores, which are shaped like the semi-elliptical springs of a carriage, are self-acting valves. A plant exhales a great deal of moisture in invisible vapor. A sunflower has been known to give off three pounds of water in twenty-four hours. This does no harm, unless the moisture escapes faster than it rises from the roots, in which case the plant wilts, and may even die. In such emergencies these little stomata, or mouths, shut up partly or completely, and so do much to check the exhalation. When moisture is given to the roots these mouths open again, and if our eyes were fine enough we should see the vapor passing out."

"I never appreciated the fact before that plants are so thoroughly alive."

"Indeed, they are alive, and therefore they need the intelligent care required by all living creatures which we have removed from their natural conditions. Nature takes care of all her children when they are where she placed them. In a case like this, wherein we are preserving plants that need summer warmth through a winter's cold, we must learn to supply her place, and as far as possible adopt her methods. It is just because multitudes do not understand her ways that so many house-plants are in a half-dying condition."

"Now, Amy, I will teach you how to water the pots," Mrs. Clifford began. "The water, you see, has been standing in the flower-room all night, so as to raise its temperature. That drawn directly from the well would be much too cold.

times cooked in a stone or earthen crock, or even in an iron pot, on the back of the stove ; the fire must be slow or they will scorch.

CANNELON OF BEEF.—Chop half a pound of lean cocked beef fine ; rub smooth in a mortar half a pound of raw fat bacon, or ham fat ; grate the yellow rind of one lemon, mix all these ingredients thoroughly, press them together in form of a roll, wrap them well in buttered paper, and bake it for twenty minutes in a moderate oven. When it is done, remove the paper without breaking the roll, and serve it either on a bed of parsley or lettuce, or with half a pint of brown sauce or meat gravy.

MOCK TERRAPIN.—Half a calf's liver ; season and fry brown. Hash it, not very fine, dust thickly with flour, a teaspoon of mixed mustard, as much cayenne pepper as will lie on half a dime, two hard eggs chopped fine, a lump of butter the size of an egg, a teacup of water. Let it boil together a minute or two. Cold veal will do if liver is not liked.

JELLIED VEAL.—Take a knuckle of veal, wash it nicely, put in a pot with water enough to cover it, boil it slowly for two or three hours, then take out all the bones—be sure to pick out all the little ones—cut the meat into small pieces, put it back in the liquor, season to taste with pepper, salt and sage, let it stew away until pretty dry, turn it in an oblong dish, or one that will mould it well to cut in slices. A nice relish for tea.

SWEETBREADS, LIVER AND HEART.—Parboil them and let them get cold, then cut them about an inch thick. Season with salt and pepper and dip them into the yolk of an egg and fine bread crumbs ; fry them light brown. When removed from the frying-pan make a gravy for them, adding, if you like, spices.

SHARP SAUCE FOR BROILED MEATS.—Chop fine an onion and a small quantity of mixed pickles ; put these into a saucepan with half a gill of vinegar, a teaspoonful of mustard, a small bit of butter, a large tablespoonful of bread-crumbs, and pepper and salt to season ; boil all together on the fire six minutes, then add a gill of water and allow the sauce to boil again for ten minutes longer. This sauce will impart a flavor to the coarsest meats or fish when broiled or fried, and also for cold meats made into hash or stew. In the latter case the quantity of water and crumbs must be doubled.

ROAST SWEETBREADS.—Boil sweetbreads, trim them and dry them, then dip in egg and bread-crumbs ; brown before the fire or in the oven ; put a good clear gravy under them and garnish with watercresses.

POIVRADE SAUCE.—Chop and fry brown in a tablespoonful of butter, one onion and one head of celery in small bits : put them over the fire with two slices of fat bacon cut in half-inch dice, a sprig of every sweet herb available except sage, a

That drawn directly from the well would be much too cold, and even as it is I shall add some warm water to take the chill off. The roots are very sensitive to a sudden chill from too cold water. No, don't pour it into the pots from that pitcher. The rain does not fall so, and as Webb says, we must imitate nature. This watering-pot with a fine rose will enable you to sprinkle them slowly, and the soil can absorb the moisture naturally and equally. Most plants need water much as we take our food, regularly, often, and not too much at a time. Let this surface soil in the pots be your guide. It should never be perfectly dry, and still less should it be sodden with moisture; nor should moisture ever stand in the saucers under the pots, unless the plants are semi-aquatic, like this calla lily. You will gradually learn to treat each plant or family of plants according to its nature. The amount of water which that calla requires would kill this heath, and the quantity needed by the heath would be the death of that cactus over there."

RICE CROQUETTES.—Take seven ounces of rice in a bright sauce-pan with a quart of rich milk; let it swell gently by the fire; stir often to prevent it burning. When it is half cooked stir in five or six ounces of pounded sugar, a few sweet pounded almonds and a strong flavoring of orange-water. Simmer these ingredients until the rice is soft and dry; put it into a flat dish to cool; then roll it in small balls, make a hole in each and fill it with rich preserve or marmalade, close it up and dip it in egg and bread crumbs; fry these in butter, a light brown color, drain them before the fire on a reversed hair-sieve covered with a soft, clean cloth. Pile them when ready to serve on a dish in pyramidal form.

APPLE PUDDING.—Make a paste with equal quantities of sifted flour and finely chopped suet, a pinch of salt and a little water. Roll it out thin into a large piece, place this as a lining in a well-buttered bowl, cut it off all round, leaving enough to fold over; roll out the trimmings to such a size as to cover the top. Peel, core and slice a quantity of good sound apples, put them in the bowl with brown sugar to taste, some chopped lemon peel, two or three cloves, and a little grated nutmeg; add a small piece of fresh butter, pack the apples tightly in, put on the cover of paste, turn up the edges and press them down, tie a floured pudding cloth over; and put the bowl into a saucepan full of boiling water, which should come well over the pudding. Grains cooked in this kettle (a covered tin bucket set in a pot of water) require a longer time by one-third, than if done in a closed steamer; hominy and pearl barley, for example, would need all of five hours. It can be shortened, however, by steaming (covered) over night, and cooking in the same water; if soaked, they will cook in a farina-kettle, in about the same time as that given in the table. But it is rather better if the soaking is used with. These grains are sometimes cooked in a stone or earthen crock, or in an iron pot, on the back of the hearth; the fire must be slow or they will TERRAPIN.—Half a calf's liver; wash and fry brown. Hash it, not very thickly with flour, a teaspoonful of mustard, as much cayenne pepper as will lie on half a dime, two hard-boiled eggs, a lump of butter the size of an egg, a teacup of water. BUTTERED OMELET.—Make a thick square of buttered toast, buttering it well on both sides, and cutting it into four or six pieces; let it stand before the fire to keep hot, but not sufficiently near to dry it up. Break three fresh eggs into a stewpan over the fire (both yolks and whites), having previously melted in it a piece of butter the size of a walnut; add a little salt, and a tablespoonful of cream or good milk; stir it rapidly over the fire until it begins to thicken; then take it off and beat it until quite smooth; set it on the fire again, and keep stirring until it is very hot and thick. With a spoon heap this lightly up on to the square of buttered toast which has been keeping hot before the fire, making it stand as high as possible. Serve instantly.

PUFF PASTE.—Take two pounds of the finest pastry flour, and the same weight of fresh butter. Work the butter in a napkin until it is well freed from water. Place the flour on a pastry slab in a heap. make a hole in the middle of it, put in it the yolks of four fresh eggs, freed from the speck, two pinches of salt, the juice of half a lemon, and the fourth part of the butter cut up in very small pieces; work the paste as quickly as possible with the fingers of one hand, adding as much tepid water as will make the paste smooth, and of the same consistency as the remaining one and a half pounds of butter. Beat the latter out into a flat square piece an inch in thickness; roll out the paste to four times the size of the piece of butter, lap this in the centre of the paste, and roll it out again as before. Repeat this operation twice, cover the paste with a woollen cloth, and let it rest for half an hour. The operation of rolling out and folding up the paste is called "giving a turn." After the paste has rested, two more turns are to be given to it, and it will be ready.

A Southern Negro's Prayer.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

The World of Monkeys.

If one of each kind of the apes and monkeys which are now living on the globe could be collected and placed in a large zoological garden, and if those which lived in former ages, and whose skeletons have been discovered by geologists, could be brought to life, and added to the whole, they would certainly form a very amusing and remarkable assemblage. What endless fun there would be, what scamperings, skirmishes and quarrels would take place; how they would grin, chatter, and pull tails all the live-long day, which had been quiet spectators before; would commence howling, and how others would rush about amongst their tired and sleepy companions, with noiseless bounds, until the return of daylight! If each of the representative monkeys could give an account of itself, whence it had come, how it lived in its native forests and woods, and what it did with itself all day, a most interesting and novel natural history book could be compiled, for only the histories of a few have been written, and they are by no means always veracious. They would have come from Asia and many of its islands, from Africa, from South America, and the isthmus to the north, and Europe would have sent one from the rocks of Gibraltar; and yet, unless those of the same country had been properly introduced, either by Dame Nature or by the chapter of accidents incident to such a very unlikely meeting as we are imagining, they would not know many of their fellows. They are exclusive in their habits, and their particular parks and forests are limited in extent, and sometimes very much so. Of course, there are some exceptions, and many kinds which roam over large countries, and are even found in different islands, have gained the superior intelligence and the ready affability and easiness of intercourse characteristic of the cosmopolitan and traveller. Every kind of temper and capacity would be shown; the Gorillas would probably be shy and cross, the Chimpanzees lively and kind, the Baboons grumpy, the Spider monkeys restless, and most of the Macaques impudent and cunning—the result of a knowledge of apes and of many monkeys. There would be every shade of color, and of shape and size; there would be many without tails, some with stumps, and others with long tails of no great use but to afford temptation to the mischievous; and not a few with fine large ones useful in the extreme by acting as a fifth limb. Many would have very human faces and sharp eyes, others would look more like dogs, and fierce enough, and there would be every variety of posture. Some would sit very well, others would go on all-fours, and others would be swinging with their long and strong arms, and making tremendous jumps and bounds assisted in some by the prehensile tail. Before retiring the old man asked me to read a chapter in the Bible, when he would pray. He said he couldn't read, but was powerful in exhortin' and prayer. After reading a chapter from Job and part of a psalm we knelt down, and the sable brother let his soul flow out to God. Even in the uncouth language of the old slave every word was sublime, and seemed as coming from one inspired. I remember one passage remarkable for its beauty and unapproachable as a figure. Said he: "If I had de wings ob a dove I'd mount de golden steps to de New Jerusalem, and dip my fingers in de blood of de Lamb and write de word redemption on de blue vault of heaven!" He prayed for the president of the United States, all his cabinet, the army, the navy, the governors of all the states, for me, his guest, for his neighbors, for absent children, for himself and family. He asked forgiveness for many sins, and thanked the Lord for many blessings.

Well, I began to get tired, I had rested my knees the best I could, but wanted to sit up badly, and at the same time did not want to give offence to my host. The boy reclined next to me with his head in the chair, sound asleep. Touching him gently, I whispered: "About how soon will your father get through?" "Has he got to de place whar Moses crossed de Red sea?" Being assured that said point had not yet been reached, the boy yawned and continued: "Well, when he gets to whar Moses crossed de Red sea, he's just half done," and he relapsed into unconsciousness.—*Dayton (O.) ### Vandalism in Westminster Abbey.

The mutilation of figures in Westminster Abbey is no novelty. The practice began early, and even kings were not spared. The solid silver head of Henry V. was wrenched off and stolen in 1546, on the 30th of January—the very day by-the-by, on which another king's real head was taken off at Whitehall a century later. "Some whig. I'll warrant you," said Sir

All would have the best possible limbs for climbing, grasping, picking, and stealing, and all would have good hands, that is to say, fingers and thumbs and wrists, in front, and foot-hands, that is to say, feet with a great thumb-like toe behind. In a general sense they would all be four-handed or quadrumanous, and this peculiarity would distinguish them from any interlopers who might have got into the assemblage unasked.

Emperor William's Oil Lamp.

The study lamp on Emperor William's work-table, is a simple oil lamp of a pattern such as, since the introduction of petroleum lamps, can hardly be met with on the table of the humblest citizen of Berlin. The following incident may account for the non-admittance of the improved petroleum lamp into the historical corner room of the Imperial Palace. The Emperor, whose simple and economical habits are well-known, has for years been accustomed to screw down the wick whenever he ceases reading or writing, or leaves the room.

When the petroleum lamps finally came into general use, the Emperor's valet, Krause, brought one and put it on the work-table. True to his habit, his Imperial master screwed down the wick on leaving the writing, and, as a matter of course, the room was soon filled with an insupportable smoke, which greatly affected the nose and eyes of the Monarch, and necessitated the opening of doors and windows. Krause finally volunteered the remark:—

"No, your Majesty, this sort of lamp will not suit."

"But what are we to do, Krause? Had ten, for himself and family. He asked forgiveness for many sins, and thanked the Lord for many blessings.

Well, I began to get tired, I had rested my knees the best I could, but wanted to sit up badly, and at the same time did not want to give offence to my host. The boy reclined next to me with his head in the chair, sound asleep. Touching him gently, I whispered: "About how soon will your father get through?" "Has he got to de place whar Moses crossed de Red sea?" Being assured that said point had not yet been reached, the boy yawned and continued: "Well, when he gets to whar Moses crossed de Red sea, he's just half done," and he relapsed into unconsciousness.—*Dayton (O.) ### Vandalism in Westminster Abbey.

The mutilation of figures in Westminster Abbey is no novelty. The practice began early, and even kings were not spared. The solid silver head of Henry V. was wrenched off and stolen in 1546, on the 30th of January—the very day by-the-by, on which another king's real head was taken off at Whitehall a century later. "Some whig, I'll warrant you," said Sir Roger de Coverly, during his famous walk round the abbey; "you ought to lock up your kings better, they'll carry off the body, too, if you don't take care." The heads of both Washington and Maj. Andre have been repeatedly carried off from the monument of the latter, "The wanton mischief," says Lamb, "of some schoolboy, fired, perhaps, with raw notions of transatlantic freedom." The abbey is a large place, and any kind of mutilation might be perpetrated successfully, provided only that it did not make too much noise.

Townshend's monument, whether beautiful or not, has suffered like the rest. But it is no recent bit of mischief. Horsley was dean until 1822, and it was done before that. "Pray, Mr. Nollekens," said a friend to that shrewd old sculptor, "can you tell me who executed the basso-relievo of Townshend's monument? I am sorry to find that some evil-minded persons have stolen one of the heads." Nollekens—"That's what I say. Dean Horsley should look after his monuments himself. Hang his wax-works. Yes, I can tell you who did it. Tom Ecker had the job, and employed another man of the name of Eckstein to mould the fillet. It's very clever."

A servant-girl in New Haven stole her mistress' false teeth. The woman told a policeman "she sheesh cosh shwenshy shollars, ansh she shwash wosh shusha wresh ashdo shteeshe fawshe sheeth—" "Wait till I find an interpreter," interrupted the policeman, thinking the woman was a newly-arrived Hungarian; but she was an American, and when her teeth were in she could talk the head off him.

Emperor William's Oil Lamp.

The study lamp on Emperor William's work-table, is a simple oil lamp of a pattern such as, since the introduction of petroleum lamps, can hardly be met with on the table of the humblest citizen of Berlin. The following incident may account for the non-admittance of the improved petroleum lamp into the historical corner room of the Imperial Palace. The Emperor, whose simple and economical habits are well-known, has for years been accustomed to screw down the wick whenever he ceases reading or writing, or leaves the room.

When the petroleum lamps finally came into general use, the Emperor's valet, Krause, brought one and put it on the work-table. True to his habit, his Imperial master screwed down the wick on leaving the writing, and, as a matter of course, the room was soon filled with an insupportable smoke, which greatly affected the nose and eyes of the Monarch, and necessitated the opening of doors and windows. Krause finally volunteered the remark:—

"But what are we to do, Krause? Had we better get our oil lamp back again? You know my eyes are weaker, and require a brighter light."

"Well, your Majesty, we can get a new lamp made, with an extra large burner, so as to do away with petroleum altogether."

"Quite right, Krause, let us try it."

And Krause got a lamp of the old pattern, had the burner enlarged to an almost colossal size, a green glass shade added to it, and to this day the new lamp, defying all innovations, asserts its place of honor on the work-table of the most diligent of all Monarchs.

Some People Never are Satisfied.

"Please, sir," said a bell-boy to a Texas hotel clerk, "Number forty say there ain't no towel in his room."

"Tell him to use one of the window curtains."

"He says, too, there ain't no pillars."

"Tell him to put his coat and vest under his head."

"And he wants a pitcher of water."

"Suffering Cyrus! But he's the worst kicker I ever struck in my life! Carry him up the horse pail!"

"He wants to know if he can't have a light."

"Here, confound him! Give him this lantern, and ask him if he wants the earth, and if he'll have it fried only on one side, or turned over?"

"Wife, I say, what in thunder are you opening all the doors for? I'm darned near frozen!" "Oh, James, it's so cold out doors! And there are so many poor people exposed on the streets! I thought I would just let out a little warm air to the poor things!"

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, MARCH 7, 1884

—The Methodist Union Bill has passed the Private Bills Committee of the House of Commons without an amendment.

—The Toronto News says the putting up of Tom White, M.P., to reply to Sir Richard Cartwright was like "pitting a singed cat against a Royal bengal tiger." Hard on Tom, but nevertheless true.

—It is now held by both political parties in the Ontario Legislature that the only valid License Act is the Crooks Act, and the Government have announced that they will protect licensees under this Act against prosecution. This should settle the question with liquor dealers. In the face of such unanimity of opinion and knowing that they will have to pay nearly double the amount for a Dominion license, it is not likely they will turn their back on the Crooks Act.

—What will not the present Parliament do in a defence of a Cabinet Minister? When Sir Charles Tupper accepted the High Commissionership Reform journals pointed out that unless he resigned his seat in the House his acceptance of this office would be a violation of the Independence of Parliament Act. The Tories argued to the contrary at the time. Sir Charles continued to act in the dual capacity, though he was careful to shirk every vote. A few days ago an action was entered against him at Ottawa for violation of the law, and at once Sir John

—We regret that pressure of local news prevents us giving in full the magnificent speech of Sir Richard Cartwright on the Budget. No system of condensation would do the speech justice. His peroration has been characterized by old parliamentarians as the grandest ever uttered in this or perhaps any other Parliament. While Sir Leonard Tilley was weak and faltering, evidently labouring under great depression, Sir Richard was calm, thoroughly self-possession and strong in facts and language.

MR. JOHN CHARLTON, M.P.

This gentleman was unable to reach Napanee on Saturday last owing to the lines of railway from Ottawa being blockaded by snow, but will appear here to-morrow instead. We trust he will have a large audience. Mr. Charlton is one of the ablest, most eloquent and independent members of the House of Commons. The chair will be taken at 2 o'clock, p.m. A general invitation is extended to the public to be present.

A meeting of the Reformers of the county will be held at 11 o'clock in the morning in Symington's Opera House for the purpose of perfecting the organization of the party in the riding. It is important that there should be a large attendance.

A Charge Refuted.

[To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.]

SIR,—In your issue of the 15th ult. appears a venomous sarcastic letter over the signature of "Bob Jack," where I am accused of receiving fees and travelling expenses for non-attendance at the County Council; and that, perhaps, I might have charged the Government for work not performed. These insinuations are unjust and untruthful, which one might expect from a resident of Sodom. Why didn't the writer give his name as an honorable man would in making such grave charges?

I feel I am not ashamed of anything done at the County Council and can defend my acts in this matter or give any other explanation if the writer, like an honorable man, will give his name.

Yours truly,

FRANCIS BOSLEY, JR.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

A petition was read from the secretary of the fire brigade, the firemen had appropriated $300, towards a firemen's den town next summer and asking to make a similar grant. A discussion the petition was referred to the Fire and Water Committee to report.

A communication from Mr. Smith, asking remission of snow shovelling charged in error to the Fire and Water Committee.

A letter from A. H. Roe, M.P., that he did not think it advisable to present the petition of the Council to Ontario should now be presented.

Reeve WILSON moved that a resolution be filed. He had had a conversation with Mr. Roe about the matter and it would be injudicious to present it at this stage as it would s town of the province were under matter. If the petition had been presented early in the session it would have been referred.

Coun. LANE said that last year he passed the petition and ordered it to be handed to Mr. Roe for presentation. He considered it was not Mr. Lane's question the Council's judgment but to do as requested.

The motion was carried.

A petition was presented from the Napanee band asking for $100 towards employing a town shoveller.

Dep-Reeve WILSON submitted a statement as for the month of February was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Tories argued to the contrary at the time. Sir Charles continued to act in the dual capacity, though he was careful to shirk every vote. A few days ago an action was entered against him at Ottawa for violation of the law, and at once Sir John came to his relief by a bill amending the Independence Act. Of course the House will pass it, as they would do anything emanating from the "Chieftain."

—On Tuesday last Hon. Mr. Hardy moved the Legislature into committee to adopt the Government resolutions increasing the license fees under the Crooks Act and to impose fees under the McCarthy Act. The resolutions provided for a much larger fee under the McCarthy Act than the other as an inducement to liquor dealers to take out provincial licenses. Mr. Meredith moved an amendment stating that the Dominion Act is unconstitutional and therefore objecting to levying of fees thereon. In speaking to his motion he said that the Crooks Act was the only constitutional license law. Mr. Mowat replied and in stirring language denounced the meddlesome and uncalled-for interference of the Dominion Government with the license question. He stated that as it was the evident determination of the Dominion Government to enforce the McCarthy it was necessary to impose fees thereon. The amendment was voted down by a majority of 14. In the debate Hon. Mr. Fraser stated that the Government would undertake to protect licensees under the Crooks Act from prosecution by the Dominion authorities.

—In speaking on the License question in the Legislature a few years ago, A. H. Roe, M.P., again referred to the letter in the Napanee Reaver to the effect that the License Inspector had received money from tavern-keepers for allowing them to sell liquor on Saturday nights and Sundays, and said he "personally knew that there was a great deal of Sunday drinking in that town. One-half of the poor in Napanee were made poorer through intemperance." No doubt Mr. Roe has personal knowledge of liquor having been sold on Sunday. For a considerable time he was in the hotel business himself and knows how it is done. It is true that the poor are made poorer by intemperance, but it does not lie in the mouth of a man who helped to make the poor poorer in this way to blow about it

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT'S GREAT SPEECH.

It Drove his Friends into Ecstasies of Delight.

The Montreal Witness referring to Sir Richard Cartwright's reply to Sir Leonard Tilley says that it was one of the best oratorical efforts ever heard in the Canadian Commons. From his exordium to his peroration he poured forth a brilliant flow of language, his emphasis being unusually strong, his argument convincing and his pronunciation perfect. His powerful arraignment of the Government drove his friends on the opposition side into ecstasies of delight. Sir Richard stated that the hon. gentleman had given several reasons for the depression. The half of his speech was devoted to the fact that there was no depression and the other half as to the reason why it existed. There was not a man in the country who would say that Canada is in a bad financial condition. He could tell the hon. gentleman that his system of high taxation did not encourage prosperity. He went on to discuss the policy of the administration and that whatever tended to impoverish the great bulk of people who are the customers of the great mass of manufacturers tended to injure the manufacturers. The Government's policy was specially adapted to retard the development of the North-West. A large loss of emigration from Canada had occurred, and it was also caused by the tariff. We were told that sugar was cheap. This article, he contended, was much dearer than it need be according to the sum that reached the treasury. If the National Policy had been successful in causing the manufacture of about $20,000,000 of textile goods, thereby giving employment to 14,000 or 15,000, it was not brought about without causing a duty of twenty or twenty-five million to be paid by the purchaser. His argument was not whether the National policy was bad or good—it was what it cost the people of the country. He claimed Canada was a too heavily taxed country. He could understand that as the settlement of the country advanced a corresponding increase should take place in its legitimate debt. In 1867 Canada had a population of 3,750,000 with a taxation of $13,500,000. In 1884 with a population of 4,300,000 the taxation was growing to thirty-five million. After referring at length and ably to many issues before the country he stated that Canada lost as much by reckless administration during the past five years as the United States did during the four years of the war.

Mr. GEO. SANDFORD was heard to drain emptying on his lot. The Street Committee to report.

interest of the Dominion Government with the license question. He stated that as it was the evident determination of the Dominion Government to enforce the McCarty it was necessary to impose fees thereon. The amendment was voted down by a majority of 14. In the debate Hon. Mr. Fraser stated that the Government would undertake to protect licensees under the Crooks Act from prosecution by the Dominion authorities.

—In speaking on the License question in the Legislature a few years ago, A. H. One-half of the poor in Napanee were made poorer through intemperance." No doubt Mr. Roe has personal knowledge of liquor having been sold on Sunday. For a considerable time he was in the hotel business himself and knows how it is done. It is true that the poor are made poorer by intemperance, but it does not lie in the mouth of a man who helped to make the poor poorer in this way to blow about it.

—Hon. Mr. Mowat is called by his opponents "the little Premier," while Sir John is honoured with the name of "a great constitutional lawyer." Recent events go to show that the names have been transposed. In every case where there has been a difference of opinion on constitutional law between Mr. Mowat and Sir John, and appeal was made to the Privy Council, Sir John has been worsted. It is Mr. Mowat who is in reality the great constitutional lawyer. Before he places a law on the statute book he is satisfied that it is constitutional, and he backs it up. Sir John passes his law and trusts to luck. He has no confidence in his own legislation. A striking example of this was given the other day. A deputation of licensed victuallers waited upon Mr. Mowat on the license question and he in free language told them that the Crooks Act was the only valid license law and that they would be perfectly safe in taking out licenses under it. When a similar deputation waited on Sir John he showed so little faith in the validity of his legislation that he advised them to take out licenses under both Acts. Fine advice from "a great constitutional lawyer!"

—Mr. A. H. Roe, M.P., is just now posing in the Local Legislature as a great High Priest of Temperance. He is greatly annoyed at the presence of a bar in the vicinity of the Legislative Chamber. The sight of people drinking is seriously effecting his digestion. Mr. Roe has got very fastidious since he went to Parliament. A month or so before going to Toronto he spent a large portion of his time in a hotel, and was apparently much gratified in pocketing the lucre obtained from the sale of the "poison." To hear Roe talk temperance in Toronto one could hardly believe that he had ever said at Bath during his election, "Come it was also caused by the tariff. We were told that sugar was cheap. This article, he contended, was much dearer than it need be according to the sum that reached the treasury. After referring at length and able to many issues before the country he stated that Canada lost as much by reckless administration during the past five years as the United States did during the four years of the war.

THE BUDGET SPEECH.

OTTAWA, MARCH 1.—The correspondent of the Montreal Witness, (Independent), telegraphs:—Sir Leonard Tilley's budget speech for 1884 delivered last night was a disappointment. This was plainly manifest to the keen and important observer by two significant evidences. Throughout the evening the question could be heard on all sides in the corridors, "Well, what did you think of the budget?" Unlike other important political events the Ministerialists were, without exception, satisfied to characterize the speech as merely non-exultant and only fair while, on the other hand, the Liberals were unanimous in pronouncing it an abject failure. When the House opened and the Finance Minister arose in his place there was a large attendance on the floor and the galleries were packed. The honorable gentleman had not been speaking long when it became evident that he was laboring under a depression. The House gradually thinned out and spectators left in large numbers. Veteran gallerymen were heard to remark that never during any former budget was the House so empty. The Government benches became painfully vacant. Sir Richard Cartwright, the Opposition financial critic, leaned carelessly back in his chair. The Hon. Mr. Blake with arms folded on his desk and head bent was evidently asleep most of the time and a few of the Ministers were noticed to be out of their seats.

On the whole the speech could hardly be said to be anything but an excuse for the failure of the National Policy, and especially as to the causes which led to the failure. It was not a complete exposition of the expenditure of the country, and the Minister himself admitted that several important items would be forthcoming. During the debate to follow, this fact will afford the Opposition considerable ground to work on. Sir Leonard's main contention was that had it not been for the existence of the National Policy the condition of things would have been infinitely worse than it is at the present time, and that the National Policy was a preventive the report was referred to the committee to report at next meeting.

On motion of Reeve WILSON, a resolution from Mitchell & Co. quoting prices of three and four for steam fire engine, was referred to Fire and Water Committee.

On motion Mr. Nelson GEORGE, in reference to the taxes on factory building, which came into operation by-law. Owing to the company he had received notice and was now called upon to do so. He was willing to pay tax amount from last July.—Referred to Finance Committee.

Mrs. MOORE was heard of the Council to contribute something towards the support of her mother, who is indigent.—The matter was referred to Poor and Sanitary Committee.

Mr. GEO. SANDFORD was heard of a drain emptying on his lot, and the Street Committee to report thereon.

On motion of Coun. LAFRANCO, Coun. CARSON, Mrs. Carleton, the pensioners' list of the Province.

Reeve WILSON moved, seconded by LAFRANCO, that the Treasurer be authorized to pay off one of the debentures of the Province, in accordance with the advice of the Finance Committee, in the interest of the Province.

Reeve WILSON submitted a resolution made by the late John M. in lieu of taxes. He moved that it be cancelled as it could not be carried.

The collector's time was extended.

The following accounts were paid:—Mair & Bros., $6.50; Geo. Wilson, auditors, $1.10; Holmes and J. Storms, each $1.00; James Plumley, carter, $1.00; Storms, bread for tramps, $1.00; & Boyes, repairs to sprinkler, $1.00; Street Committee, $1.00; Storms, wood, $3.50; Treasurer, $57.35.

The Council then adjourned.

DOMINION LICENSE ACT NOTICE

Is hereby given that under the Provincial Liquor License Act, 1883, every license to sell liquors by wholesale or by retail, shall be subject to the provisions of the Act, and the license is to be held for the same.

Every petition for an hotel, saloon or other license, shall be filed with the Chief Inspector, and the license is to have effect from the date of the filing.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday evening last. Present
—Mayor Joy, Reeve Wilson, Dep-Reeve Carscallen and Couns. Lane, Perry, Wallace, Stevens, Rose, Carson and Lapum.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

A petition was read from the captain and secretary of the fire brigade, stating that the firemen had appropriated their salary, $300, towards a firemen's demonstration in town next summer and asking the Council to make a similar grant. After some discussion the petition was referred to the Fire and Water Committee to report.

A communication from Mr. J. A. Sex-smith, asking remission of $1.90 tax for snow shovelling charged in error, was referred to the Fire and Water Committee.

A letter from A. H. Roe, M.P.P., stated that he did not think it advisable that the petition of the Council to Ontario Legislature should now be presented.

Reeve WILSON moved that the communication be filed. He had had a conversation with Mr. Roe about the matter and agreed that it would be injudicious to present the petition at this stage as it would show that the towns of the province were uniting in this matter. If the petition had been put in early in the session it would have been different.

Coun. LANE said that last year's Council passed the petition and ordered the clerk to hand it to Mr. Roe for presentment. He considered it was not Mr. Roe's duty to question the Council's judgment in the matter but to do as requested.

The motion was carried.

A petition was presented from the members of the Napanee band asking for a grant of $100 towards employing a tutor.

Dep-Reeve WILSON submitted the Treasurer's monthly statement as follows which

He also submitted a report of the Finance Committee recommending the adoption of the Auditors' report.

Coun. HENWOOD submitted pay list of Street Committee, No. 2, which was adopted.

Coun. LAPEN submitted the report of the Poor and Sanitary Committee which showed the expenditure of the month to be: For pensioners, $19.50; poor people, not pen- sioners, $6.70; wood and coal distributed, $30.25; total, $56.45; cash on hand, $30.55.

—Adopted.

Reeve WILSON stated that the chairman of the Committee on Police was out of town, hence no report could be made to night. He asked that time be extended till next meet- ing.—Granted.

Coun. LANE submitted the report of the special committee on application for a grant to a band, which recommended that a grant of $100 be made towards the purchase of $800 worth of instruments, said instruments to be the property of the town, and the band to be under the control of Napanee Lodge, I. O. O. F.

The other petition for a band grant was then taken up and after some discussion it and the report was referred to the same commit- tee to report at next meeting.

On motion of Reeve WILSON a communi- cation from Mitchell & Co. of Montreal, quoting prices of three and four way branches for steam fire engine, was referred to the Fire and Water Committee.

On motion Mr. Nelson German was heard in reference to the taxes on the old brush factory building, which came under exemp- tion by-law. Owing to the failure of the company he had received no rent last year and was now called upon to pay the taxes. He was willing to pay taxes on half the amount from last July.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

Mrs. MOORE was heard on a petition to the Council to contribute something towards the support of her mother, Mrs. Wood, an indigent.—The matter was referred to the Poor and Sanitary Committee with power to act.

Mr. GEO. SANDFORD was heard respecting a drain emptying on his lot.—Referred to the Street Committee to report.

GREAT BATTLE BETWEEN REBELS AND BRITISH TROOPS.

2,300 Rebels Killed—24 of the British Killed and 142 Wounded.

The New York Sun of March 2nd contains the following cablegram:—'Trinkitat, March 1.—A battle raged all day yesterday three miles from Fort Baker, where the rebels were found in force, with two guns mounted, in an old fort. On Thursday night Gen. Graham's expedition encamped near Fort Baker, the infantry in front and the cavalry in the rear. On Friday morning after breakfast troops were formed in an oblong, the front and rear of which were longer than the sides, owing to the different strength of the regiments. The Gordon Highlanders in line formed the advance, with two Gatling guns and one Gardiner in the right corner and two Gardiners and one Gatling in the left corner. The 89th Regiment in line formed the right hand side of the square, and the Black Watch the rear. The whole strength of the British forces was something less than 4,000 men. The length of front was 950 yards. The Hussars acted as scouts, and advanced in a semi-circle 1,000 yards ahead, covering the front and flanks of the main force. The troops advanced over the sand knolls and scrup for a mile from Fort Baker, along the Teb Road, when the rebels opened fire with Remington rifles, but the range was too long and the shots proved ineffective.

At 1 p.m., after an hour of intense fighting, the rebels gave way and bolted outright. The Gatling guns and Martini rifles had caused great havoc there. The British pursued them as they fell back, and advanced as far as the fresh water wells of Teb, where the rebels made their last stand. The Sheiks who advanced empty-handed to show they bore a charmed life were stricken down with bayonets. The Highlanders carried the next earthworks, capturing three guns. At the end of four hours of arduous fighting the British gained possession of the rebel camps, of the huts, and of the wells. The cavalry on the right flank charged the retreating rebels, who did not bolt, but struck the troopers who rode among them, giving blow for blow. A splendid display of heroism was made by three mounted rebels. They resolutely maintained their ground against the shock of two cavalry regiments before being cut down. They continued to fight after the third charge, killing several soldiers and wounding Col. Barrow with their spears. The enemy retired slowly, and in consequence of this the British kept up the firing for a long time after the fortunes of the day had been decided. The rebels lost 1,000 killed. Gen. Graham decided to remain at the wells of Teb for the day and night. The intention was to continue the advance to Tokar on Saturday a.m. More fighting is anticipated. The spoils taken from Baker Pasha were in a large measure recovered. The losses of the British in the fight were 24 killed and 142 wounded. The British forces captured four Krupp guns, two Howitzers, and one machine gun.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Jas. F. Huffman and bride arrived home on Saturday last from their honeymoon, looking hale and hearty. .... Mr. Myrrel Sills of Richmond is visiting at Reeve Parks' and Mr. Hiram Huffman's. .... Miss Georgiana Woodcock returned home on Monday last after a two months' visit with her sister, Mrs. Vissar, north of Brockville. .... Mrs. Outwater, Mr. Nelson Outwater's mother, who has been ill for some time, is not expected to recover.

—A successful tea-meeting was held at Sand Hill school house on Tuesday evening last. Music was furnished by ladies from a distance and Mr. A. Quackenbush represented the platform.

—On Thursday of last week Mr. N. Woodcock called a meeting of the patrons of Hay Bay cheese factory, which was largely attended. The secretary, Mr. Irvine Parks, read a statement of receipts and expenditure of last season which gave every satisfaction, and after some routine business was transacted Mr. Parks was unanimously elected secretary-treasurer and salesman for the current year, 1884.

—On Saturday last Mr. Elisha Sharp and son started for Napanee to attend the Reform meeting and avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing Mr. John Charlton, M.P., deliver an address on the burning question of the day; and when but a short distance from their residence their horse became frightened, and on Mr. Sharp getting out of the cutter to catch the horse by the head it sprung, knocked him down and fell across his legs holding him there until his son could get the animal up. They then returned home and Mr. Sharp found his leg somewhat jammed but thought it would be all right in a few days, and on Sunday pain became so intense that Dr. Clark was sent for, and upon examination the bone was found shattered near the ankle of the right leg. Mr. Sharp is recovering nicely and we trust he will be able to attend the Reform meeting on Saturday next. Mr. Sharp has the sympathy of the whole neighbourhood.

—I noticed a few weeks ago that a correspondent of the Beaver boasted of a young lady of Hay Bay having $60.00 of surplus money on hand. Now, Mr. Editor, I can inform that correspondent that there are four girls on Hay Bay who are to have $600 each on the day of their wedding; another one is to have a cow and a heifer. I don't think the $60 girl is anywhere.

—The young people of this neighborhood will give a necktie social and an oyster supper in Parks' chapel on Tuesday evening next, 11th inst., to commence at seven o'clock sharp. The proceeds are to be given to the Rev. Mr. Betts, who has been afflicted for the last six months, by a severe attack of dyspepsia. No pains will be spared to make the supper a grand success, and every member of the Bay circuit should come over and assist the young people of this section in making a good full house for Mr. Betts. Several Rev. gentlemen have kindly consented to be present and a good programme is already prepared, consisting of speeches, troopers who rode among them, giving blow for blow. A splendid display of heroism was made by three mounted rebels. They resolutely maintained their ground against the shock of two cavalry regiments before being cut down. They continued to fight after the third charge, killing several soldiers and wounding Col. Barrow with their spears. The enemy retired slowly, and in consequence of this the British kept up the firing for a long time after the fortunes of the day had been decided. The rebels lost 1,000 killed. Gen. Graham decided to remain at the wells of Teb for the day and night. ## Nothing Superior to it Ever Heard.

[Ottawa Free Press.]

Sir Richard Cartwright's speech on the Budget will rank with the finest efforts of oratory in the English language. Nothing superior to it was ever heard even in the best days of the British parliament.

CALL Health and Happiness

How? DO H

Are your Kidneys diseased? "Kidney Wort brought me from where, after I had been given up by Detroit." M. W. Deveraux, Mee

Are your nerves "Kidney Wort cured me from &c., after I was not expected to live Goodwin, Ed. Christian Monitor, C somewhat jammed but thought it would be all right in a few days, and on Sunday pain became so intense that Dr. Clark was sent for, and upon examination the bone was found shattered near the ankle of the right leg Mr. Sharp is recovering nicely and we trust he will be able to attend the Reform meeting on Saturday next. Mr. Sharp has the sympathy of the whole neighbourhood.

I noticed a few weeks ago that a correspondent of the Beaver boasted of a young lady of Hay Bay having $60.00 of surplus money on hand. Now, Mr. Editor, I can inform that correspondent that there are four girls on Hay Bay who are to have $600 each on the day of their wedding; another one is to have a cow and a heifer. I don't think the $60 girl is anywhere.

The young people of this neighborhood will give a necktie social and an oyster supper in Parks' chapel on Tuesday evening next, 11th inst., to commence at seven o'clock sharp. The proceeds are to be given to the Rev. Mr. Betts, who has been afflicted for the last six months, by a severe attack of dyspepsia. No pains will be spared to make the supper a grand success, and every member of the Bay circuit should come over and assist the young people of this section in making a good full house for Mr. Betts. Several Rev. gentlemen have kindly consented to be present and a good programme is already prepared, consisting of speeches, dialogues, recitations, readings and music, both vocal and instrumental. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission 30 cents each.

Fluid Lightning.

WIFE.—What's the matter now, John.

HUSBAND.—Oh, that neuralgia and toothache near kills me.

WIFE.—Why don't you go to T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores and get a bottle of Fluid Lightning, you know it cures all such things as toothache, neuralgia, headache, lumbago, earache, sore throat, etc. It gives instant relief.

Danger Traps.

Neglected colds are the fatal traps that ensnare many a victim beyond possibility of rescue. Take a cold or cough in time and it is easily conquered by that safe and pleasant vegetable remedy, Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. Asthma, Bronchitis and pulmonary complaints generally soon yield to its healing influence.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"Brown's Household Panacea" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago, and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most assuredly quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea" being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted. "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 14-12-1v.

THE USE OF DR. WHEELER'S COMPOUND

Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya as food for the brain and nervous system is founded on well established chemical and physiological laws, since it is composed of elements entering the formation of these organs and capable of supplying them with nourishment. Great mental efforts, anxiety, excitement, worry, fatigue, blood poisoning from disease or impure air, excessive indulgence in habits that use up the vital powers, speedily interfere with the nutrition of the brain and nerves which preside over all the functions of the body, and sooner or later fatal consequences must inevitably result. In the Elixir we have a reliable remedy for nerve exhaustion and loss of constitutional vigor from these causes.

DENISON.—In Napanee, on Wednesday, March 5th, Mary Denison, wife of Mr. R. Denison, aged 62 years, 11 months and 2 days.

BOOTH.—At Sydenham, on Saturday, March 1st, Helen Kathleen, youngest daughter of Mr. Fred. Booth, aged 1 year and 10 months.

Butter Buyers

everywhere are refusing to take white, lardy looking butter except at "grease" prices. Consumers want nothing but gilt-edged butter, and buyers therefore recommend their patrons to keep a uniform color throughout the year by using the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It is the only color that can be relied on to never injure the butter, and to always give the perfect color. Sold by druggists and merchants.

Pimples and Blotches.

Call at T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores and get a package of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is composed of Vaseline, Carbolic Acid and Cerate, and has never failed to remove Pimples, Blotches, Ulcerated Sores, Rough Skin. It cures when others fail. Try it.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.

It is a fact that Alonzo Howe of Tweed, had a fever sore that afflicted him for thirty-five years. Six bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him, which he considers almost a miracle. It was but the natural result of the remedy restoring pure blood and perfect secretion.

Salt Rheum Cured.

Are you troubled with Salt Rheum, Rough Skin, Pimples or Canker Sores; if so go at once to T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores and get a package of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price twenty-five cents. It was never known to fail.

A Favorite Everywhere.

Wherever introduced Hagyard's Yellow Oil finds friends. It is the old reliable household remedy for external and internal use in all aches, pains, lameness and soreness of the flesh. A. L. Green, a prominent druggist of Belleville, says: "It is a great favorite here and has a good sale."

A Double Benefit.

James Moore, a prominent resident of Leamington, writes that he cured himself of Dyspepsia of a year's duration by one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and two bottles cured his wife who had been for years a sufferer from the same disease. He conscientiously recommends it to all suffering from similar troubles.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in his admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address,
The CULVERWELL MEDICAL Co.,

Think kindly at this time o' year,
When winter rules an' fields are bare :
An' there is muckle o' gnid cheer,
O them wha want sae unca sair.

Think o' the mon'y auld an' young
Wha poortith's weary burden bear,
Whase state has aft been sadly sung,
Been tauld wi' mon'y a saddest tear.

Amid yer plenty think fu' weel,
O them whase hames are cauld an' bare ;
Whase claes are thih, wha hae small meal,
The scantiest o' common fare,

CHAPTER XVII. (CONTINUED.)

"Did I scowl, Nettie?" he asked eagerly. "Did you see me, dear? Then—then you were not absolutely engrossed in Mr. Burgoyne?"

Something oddly exultant in his tone caused her to look round quickly with surprised bright eyes; something in the handsome face made her drop them till the black lashes rested on the smooth skin that burned with a sudden blush. But Nettie was not easily taken aback; despite that slight evidence of confusion, she answered cheerfully and briskly—

"I cannot understand your prejudice against poor Mr. Burgoyne. Between ourselves, I do not think his plays over-brilliant; but he is one of our most popular authors, and could do anything he pleased for you."

"If he were Shakespeare himself, it would make no difference," Vance said, fiercely. "If he would write another Hamlet for me, I would not thank him if he wrote for love of you."

The words were in the Bombaste vein; but the young man saw nothing absurd in them when he poured them forth with unfeigned and passionate earnestness, nor did Nettie, though her sense of the ridiculous was acute enough as a rule.

She was very far from laughing now—so far that, when he drew a little nearer, he saw the glitter of tears on the dark lashes, saw the red lip quiver in a vain attempt at speech. He had not made Nettie angry; he had hurt her, which was far, very far from his wish.

"Forgive me, Nettie!" he cried penitently. "I was a brute, a wretch!"

"You were," Nettie agreed, with a sudden smile and disconcerting candour. "I shall not contradict you. Vance: but

"And claim a prize?" Vance interrupted, finishing the sentence audaciously. "I claim it now, Nettie; and you will admit my claim."

So, from mistress and pupil, Nettie Clare and Vance Singleton became betrothed lovers, and, to their infinite content, found that the course of their love ran on smoothly from end to end.

Mrs. Clare heard the story the same night, and seemed well pleased to hear it, though she somewhat astonished the lovers by averring that she had seen it all from the first.

"You are all that I could wish for my Nettie, Vance. You know how good she is; how brave and loving and unselfish; so I will not sing her praise now. You have a bright future before you. You love her, and will work hard for her sake. You are a gentlemen, such a one as Robert Clare's child should wed—so far, all things are in your favor; but—there is always a 'but' in this disappointing world, my dear—there are your people, Vance."

She looked and spoke gently; but there was a certain trouble in the kind eyes that were so like Nettie's, with the hopeful light quenched, and there was an earnest ring in the pretty soft voice.

"My people, Mrs. Clare!" Vance said, a little uneasily. "I thought we agreed, before this question arose, that I was to tread the path I had chosen alone, to win my laurels unaided, and mention them only when they were won. I think I will take the same course with Nettie."

"My dear boy"—the woman smiled and sighed together—her conscience and inclination were at war—"you do not know the misery such marriages may cause. When I married Robt Clare, I did not know that he had quarrelled with all his people for my sake; but it was so—and, though"—with a little flush of pride in the remembrance, which for the moment made the worn face young and pretty—"though I know that to the hour of his death he never once regretted his choice, yet he felt the estrangement cruelly, as you may some day feel yours."

"Never!" Vance answered, in perfect honesty. "In fact, Mrs. Clare, the arguments that may convince other fellows don't touch me at all. Whom have I to quarrel with? A step-father whose generosity I have so tired out that I think he would be glad to see me settle down as a shoemaker, a mother who would never quarrel with me in any circumstances, and who, meeting Nettie as my wife, will surely fall in love with her."

"And your sister?" Mrs. Clare said, as he began to flounder in his speech.

He shrugged his shoulders in genuine indifference this time.

"Cristine will, I do not doubt, be disagreeable, as she invariably is; it would hardly be worth while to consider her."

Still Mrs. Clare looked vaguely troubled, leaving to herself her doubts and con-cannot count up even the mate said, looking up into his face with laughing eyes. "What a happy must be, Vance!"

"Poor Nora!" Vance answered bitterly. "She has made a bargain; but she is very far off happy."

"You think she has not for Beaupre; out, if that were so, not marry Lord de Gretton, su-

Vance smiled at her eager. This girl of a lower world knew the social sacrifices imposed as ties on the ladies who despised since he had told her the story Beaupre's love and death, warmest sympathy had been the unlucky young pair; but Gretton episode was to her almost consistent and inexplicable.

"My dear Nettie, the whole arranged for her; you do not understand. Mr. Singleton said, dismissing her thus summarily because he all explanation would be was simple betrothed. "When given fortune, they must marry, even hearts are dead. Nora has simulated a shelter and a home—things necessary even in romantic grief."

He rather liked the ring of truth and thought he had settled the most delightful prosaic and fashion; but the very practical stirred Nettie to renewed protest. "A home, a shelter!" she little glow of enthusiasm. "I will not break faith with the dead, but Vance, we could give her that."

She looked so pretty with the flush, the earnest sparkle in her eyes. She was, if they had but Nora's better angel, pleading last avenue of escape might of doomed girl. But Vance had sed her, and tried to silence her rather forced jest—Nora had a besides, what had they to offer her with all that Lord de Gretton give?

"But you will give her that, Vance," Nettie pleaded still, "see her, and tell her all? You also that she can find 'a shelter home' with us."

And, so pressed, he promised his word—to how little purpose rowful sequel showed.

CHAPTER XVII.

It was not until two days after his marriage that Vance found courage to fulfil his promise and pay his final visit to his step-house.

"Of course I run the risk that cad De Gretton, or worse, running against Cristine and me the young fellow soliloquised, ed at the door. "But I must if it is only once again—must h-

Hamlet for me, I would not thank him if he wrote for love of you."

"Forgive me, Nettie!" he cried penitently. "I was a brute, a wretch!"

"You were," Nettie agreed, with a sudden smile and disconcerting candour. "I shall not contradict you, Vance; but please tell me why?"

The question, the pained pleading of the bright eyes sparkling through the tears that he had brought there, set Mr. Singleton's heart throbbing wildly, and forced from his lips the words he did not mean to speak then.

"Why, the answer is a paradox, Nettie! I was harsh and rude and brutal to you, dear, because, best of all things in this world, I love you!"

The last words came out with an abrupt jerk, and were followed by a brief silence. Nettie gave her companion one quick startled glance, blushed violently, paused, and walked on rapidly.

He had to walk beside her in impatient silence for a minute or so, for they were not alone in the street, and he could hardly renew his love-suit till their fellow-pedestrians had passed by. Vance girded at the little restraint at the time; but perhaps it was well that it came. It gave him time to find words and shape his thoughts, and allowed her to recover from the shock of finding an easy-going everyday intimate transformed into an ardent and exacting lover.

At last, the intruders gone, he ventured to draw his companion's hand again within his arm and try to moderate her pace a little. He felt the slim fingers tremble in his clasp; she struggled to withdraw them, but so faintly that her lover drew a happy augury from the fact.

"Were you trying to outrun me, Nettie? Are you so angry that you cannot speak?"

She raised her eyes with an evident effort. Assuredly there was no anger in their shining depths.

"Are you sure, Vance?" she asked tremulously, with a troubled drawing together of the pretty pencilled brows that were such expressive features of Miss Clare's face.

"Sure of what, sweetheart?" Vance answered gaily—for she was his sweetheart now; he was sure of her heart as of his own, though as yet the decisive words were all unspoken.

"Sure that it is not a mistake, a fancy?" she asked, with a nervous smile. "Oh, you need not laugh, Vance! Such things

"Never!" Vance answered, in perfect honesty. "In fact, Mrs. Clare, the arguments that may convince other fellows don't touch me at all. Whom have I to quarrel with? A step-father whose generosity I have so tired out that I think he would be glad to see me settle down as a shoemaker, a mother who would never quarrel with me in any circumstances, and who, meeting Nettie as my wife, will surely fall in love with her."

"And your sister?" Mrs. Clare said, as he began to flounder in his speech.

He shrugged his shoulders in genuine indifference this time.

Still Mrs. Clare looked vaguely troubled, longing to banish her doubts and consent for Nettie's sake, to see things through the rosy haze that shrouded them, but conscientiously bent on showing the reverse of the medal and laying all objections to the plan before her would-be son-in-law.

"Then there is the other young lady, Miss Bruce. She is to make some brilliant marriage, Nettie tells me."

"She will be Lady de Gretton in six weeks' time—poor Nora!" said Vance, with heartfelt compassion for the girl whose splendid marriage would be barren of all the love and trust that would richly sanctify his own. "But Miss Bruce is my step-sister only—not even that indeed—she is my mother's husband's child."

"Hardly a close connection, I admit," Mrs. Clare said, smiling; "still she will be so very grand a personage——"

"Grand or not," the young man interrupted a little impatiently, "Nora is a thoroughly kind and simple-hearted girl. She is the one person I intend to place confidence in, for she is the one person on whom I can rely."

"But——"

"You said there was a 'but' in all things. I do not think there can be another to make protest with in this," he said, cutting her nervous half-hearted objections determinately short, and turning to welcome Nettie, who at that moment entered the room.

Perhaps Mrs. Clare was not, on the whole, very sorry to have her conscientious protests thus trenchantly disposed of. She was glad that her daughter should find a safe companion and protector in the dangerous path she trod with such innocent self-relying courage, glad to welcome Vance as a son, and relieved to find that the small circle in which her life was bound was to be enlarged, not broken, that they were still to form one family together.

"I always feared that some one would take Nettie from me," she said, with tearful gratitude, when the two young people laid their matured plans for the future before her. "I am thankful you are not a rich man, Vance."

"I wish I were a little richer for Net-

And, so pressed, he promised his word—to how little purposeful sequel showed.

CHAPTER XVII.

It was not until two days after his marriage that Vance found courage to fulfil his promise and pay his final visit to his step-mother.

"Of course I run the risk that cad De Gretton, or worse, running against Cristine and me, the young fellow soliloquised, ed at the door. "But I must if it is only once again—must bid old playfellow good-bye; but is my promise. We must offer hospitality of an attic to our people."

But he had so little hope this would be accepted that he had brought his wedding-present with a cheap trifle of a ring—an engagement ring in the future Lady de Gretton's list, but still something better money he had earned. He smiled sadly, thinking how the old Nora had a valued such a gift.

He was lucky in the time of day. The servant told him that Mrs. Bruce and Miss Singleton were out; Miss Bruce was in; and Vance leaped with pleasure as he heard. But it was not the old received him; it was the frozen creature who seemed to stand at a distance. Though she was composed and more beautiful than there was something in her face made the young fellow's heart a brightened a little at sight and promptly questioned him whereabouts and means of livelihood had by this time become a mystery to Mr. Singleton's friend.

"Mrs. Bruce is so anxious to see you, Vance," she said, with a gentleness; and the gray eyes lost moment the strained far-away look so infinitely sad. "I wish you would let her know what you are doing for her mind at rest."

"No harm, at least, Nora."

"Of that I am sure; but still"

"Would you care to know, Vance?"

Vance crossed the room with a step and stood by the tall velvet-draped piece, looking down upon the young man seated in the low-backed chair, with the noon sun slanting in on the young man's head, the pale perfect face, the white dress, and the slender hands, on one of which was four and dazzling reflections in the betrothal-ring. How stately in her delicate, high-bred bearing different from his little everyday. And yet the young man thanked in his inmost heart, that Nettie looked like that.

"Sure that it is not a mistake, a fancy?" she asked, with a nervous smile. "Oh, you need not laugh, Vance! Such things often happen; people imagine themselves in love with—with actresses; but it is a mere delusion, after all."

"Is it? Then I pity the people, first for being deluded, next for being undeceived—I am neither. It is not an idle fancy that I offer you, Nettie, but a real honest lover. It was not the actress that dazzled me, but the brave and loving daughter, who is the best and truest of all women in my eyes, the only wife in the world for me. Nettie, are you angry still?"

The question seemed to rouse her from a happy dream. She turned her radiant face round, and quite bravely and frankly, as Nettie Clare did all things, placed her little hand in his.

"Angry? No; I am so very, very glad! Is it shocking to say that, Vance? Because it is absolutely true."

She spoke with a nervous haste, half laughing and half crying, as her way was when strongly moved.

"Tell me a little more truth, Nettie. Say you love me."

"I love you!" She repeated the words with a sweet gravity, and then, with one of her rapid changes, began to laugh again. "I have, I think, loved you always—was it horrid of me, Vance?—but I thought you would never, never guess. I was always giving you lessons and finding fault and scolding; I thought you would look on me as a schoolmistress and——" child.

"Hardly a close connection, I admit," Mrs. Clare said, smiling; "still she will be so very grand a personage——"

"Grand or not," the young man interrupted a little impatiently, "Nora is a thoroughly kind and simple-hearted girl. She is the one person I intend to place confidence in, for she is the one person on whom I can rely."

She was glad that her daughter should find a safe companion and protector in the dangerous path she trod with such innocent self-relying courage, glad to welcome Vance as a son, and relieved to find that the small circle in which her life was bound was to be enlarged, not broken, that they were still to form one family together.

"I always feared that some one would take Nettie from me," she said, with tearful gratitude, when the two young people laid their matured plans for the future before her. "I am thankful you are not a rich man, Vance."

"I wish I were a little richer for Nettie's sake," poor Vance said, remembering rather ruefully that his wife's income would considerably outweigh his own; but the overplus would support her mother and sister; there was comfort to his self-respect in that thought.

"You are as rich as I wish you to be," Nettie said, with a joyous laugh. "and you will be the brightest of 'stars' by-and-by. Mother, I hope Vance will not want to hide us in a corner when the Duke and Duchess come hunting by-and-by."

It was all very pleasant fooling, and they were so evidently and fully content with the arrangement that he could not but be content and happy too. After all, he was young still; his earlier youth had been wasted, but time was on his side; he would redeem his manhood by hard and honest work. It was beginning life again, on a lower level perhaps, but beginning it with an earnest purpose and with Nettie by his side.

So all things arranged themselves; and coincidently with those gorgeous arrangements for Nora's wedding with which the fashionable papers were so busy their modest preparations were made. Many a time, while Nettie stitched and worked at the trim and dainty dresses she regarded with simple pride, she would laughingly bid her lover read the costly items of his step-sister's trousseau, as the florid millinery vocabulary set them forth.

"Satins and velvet, and lace and broche, and brocatelle and—— Oh, I received him; it was the frozen creature who seemed to at a distance. Though she was composed and more beautiful there was something in her face made the young fellow's heart a brightened a little at sight and promptly questioned him whereabouts and means of living last had by this time become a mystery to Mr. Singleton's friend.

How stately in her delicate, high-bred beauty different from his little everyday. And yet the young man thanked in his inmost heart, that Nettie looked like that.

"Nora, would you care to hear a dull prosaic story—the story of it is and it is to be?"

"Yes."

The answer was brief enough there was no mistaking the sincerity of the assent.

"The story is for your ears alone; I will repeat it to no one, even if you, until I give you leave?"

"It will not shock me—you good," she said, eyeing the keenly. "And of course I will if you wish it; but your mother

"My mother shall know all in not just yet. Listen, Nora, and tell you why."

She listened without one in while he told the full story since he had left Nettleton; when he had reached the end with her great grey eyes fixed on as though she were trying to say something more.

"Are you shocked, after all Vance asked at last, a little in silence.

She looked up quickly then. "No," she said, holding out hands, and speaking with a so sionate intensity—"no; I am glad. It is strange work, Vance is work."

"Poor Nora!" Vance answered a little happy."

"You think she has not forgotten Mr.
Beaupre; out, if that were so, she would not marry Lord de Gretton, surely!"

Vance smiled at her eager certainty.
This girl of a lower world knew so little of the social sacrifices imposed as solemn duties on the ladies who despised her. Long since he had told her the story of Arthur Beaupre's love and death, and her warmest sympathy had been excited for the unlucky young pair; but the De Gretton episode was to her altogether inconsistent and inexplicable.

"My dear Nettie, the whole thing was arranged for her; you do not understand,"
Mr. Singleton said, dismissing the subject thus summarily because he felt that all explanation would be wasted on his simple betrothed. "When girls have no fortune, they must marry, even if their hearts are dead. Nora has simply accepted a shelter and a home—things that are necessary even in romantic grief."

He rather liked the ring of this speech, and thought he had settled things in the most delightful prosaic and practical fashion; but the very practical details stirred Nettie to renewed protest.

"A home, a shelter!" she cried, in a little glow of enthusiasm. "She need not break faith with the dead, then. Why, Vance, we could give her that!"

She looked so pretty with the generous flush, the earnest sparkle in her soft hazel eyes. She was, if they had but known it, Nora's better angel, pleading that this last avenue of escape might open to the doomed girl. But Vance had only kissed her, and tried to silence her with a rather forced jest—Nora had a home still;
besides, what had they to offer her, compared with all that Lord de Gretton could give?

"But you will give her the choice,
Vance," Nettie pleaded still, "when you see her, and tell her all? You will say also that she can find 'a shelter and a home' with us."

And, so pressed, he promised—and kept his word—to how little purpose the sorrowful sequel showed.

CHAPTER XVII.

It was not until two days before his marriage that Vance found time courage to fulfil his promise to Nettie,
and pay his final visit to his step-father's house.

"Of course I run the risk of meeting that cad De Gretton, or worse still, of running against Cristine and my mother,"
the young fellow soliloquised, as he app-

"With work and love, you should be good and happy. Heaven grant that you may be both, dear Vance!"

Her step-brother stooped and kissed her, pitying the envied of all London with an intense and aching pity.

"I give you back your prayer, my dear kind Nora—Heaven make you happy!"

"No, no!" She clung to him with a sudden passion, a look of the wildest terror flitting across her white face. "Pray that I may be good, Vance; that is all I ever dare ask now. Sometimes my head is so confused, I fear—" She stopped short, startled perhaps by something in the young man's face, controlled herself
by an effort, and went on quite calmly—
"But you have something there, Vance—something you mean to show me—Nettie's picture, I hope."

He had two things—Nettie's picture and the little pearl ring—which looked truly absurd beside Lord de Gretton's diamonds. He presented the latter rather awkwardly enough, glad to get the ridiculous ceremony over. But Nora looked at it until the tears rose in the large gray eyes, and a softer expression
than he had seen on her face since Arthur Beaupre's death came to it then.

If he had but spoken then, while with that pathetic break in her clear voice,
she tried to thank him; if, in that softened moment, he had urged Nettie's prayer, he might have saved her even then;
but the golden moment passed, the opportunity slipped from him.

A carriage drove up to the door, and the servant announced Lady Olivia Blake.
Nora became her proud self again. There was nothing for Vance to do but bow and withdraw.

Two days afterwards, Nettie Clare and Vance Singleton were quietly married at a little suburban church, with Mrs. Clare and Jenny for the only witnesses. Never was a more modest ceremony observed, never did happier pair join hands and hearts before the altar, or swear with more fervent faith to love and honor, to love and cherish, until death them should part. Mrs. Clare, looking a pretty picture of matronly dignity in the gray silk dress and dainty lace bonnet that Nettie's nimble fingers had deftly put together, shed a few natural tears, but was, on the whole, serenely happy and content, while Jenny absolutely forgot to be ill and fretful for one whole long day, so delighted was she with the dignity of her bridesmaid's duties.

And Nettie? Nettie, in her pretty white frock, with the orange-blossom wreath crowning her boyish curls, and the misty whiteness of her net veil hiding the shy sweet face—Nettie needed no splen-dour of point-lace, of sheeny satin, or of glittering jewels, to make her as fair a bride as the sun ever shone upon, though the items of her costume had been chosen

CHAPTER XVII.

It was not until two days before his marriage that Vance found time courage to fulfil his promise to Nettie, and pay his final visit to his step-father’s house.

“Of course I run the risk of meeting that cad De Gretton, or worse still, of running against Cristine and my mother,” the young fellow soliloquised, as he rapped at the door. “But I must see Nora, if it is only once again—must bid my dear old playfellow good-bye; besides, there is my promise. We must offer the hospitality of an attic to our peeress-elect.”

But he had so little hope this hospitality would be accepted that he had actually brought his wedding-present with him—a cheap trifle of a ring—an absurd item in the future Lady de Gretton’s present list, but still something bought with money he had earned. He smiled a little sadly, thinking how the old Nora would have a aluedsuch a gift.

He was lucky in the time of his coming. The servant told him that Mrs. Bruce and Miss Singleton were out, but that Miss Bruce was in; and Vance’s heart leaped with pleasure as he sent in his card. But it was not the old Nora who received him; it was the same pale frozen creature who seemed to hold pity at a distance. Though she was perfectly composed and more beautiful than ever, there was something in her face yet which made the young fellow’s heart ache. She brightened a little at sight of him, and promptly questioned him as to his whereabouts and means of living, which last had by this time become a profound mystery to Mr. Singleton’s friends.

“Mrs. Bruce is so anxious about you, Vance,” she said, with a gentle earnestness; and the gray eyes lost for a moment the strained far-away look that was so infinitely sad. “I wish you could let her know what you are doing, and set her mind at rest.”

“Of that I am sure; but still—”

“Would you care to know, Nora?”

Vance crossed the room with the words, and stood by the tall velvet-draped nan-

But, though the dress was muslin and the veil plain net, though Nettie laughingly protested that flowers should be her sole adornment, she did wear jewels, and jewels of no small value, after all.

The day before the wedding, the day succeeding Vance’s South Kensington visit, she had received a large and heavy parcel by private hand. Opening it with eager curiosity—for Nettie’s bridal presents had been but few—she saw an old-fashioned jewel-box mounted and clasped in silver. How well her lover knew that box! How clearly he saw what lay within, even before Nettie raised the lid!—the dark blue velvet slope, the moonlight glimmer of the three ropes of pearls. Nora Bruce was bidding good-bye to her old life indeed when she parted with the one possession Cristine had always envied her, the one possession of which she had been most innocently proud. They were her mother’s jewels.

How stately she looked in her delicate, high-bred beauty—how different from his little every-day Nettie ! And yet the young man thanked Heaven, in his inmost heart, that Nettie never looked like that. "Nora, would you care to hear a very dull prosaic story—the story of my life as it is and it is to be ?" "Yes." The answer was brief enough ; but there was no mistaking the pleased alac- rity of the assent. "The story is for your ear alone. You will repeat it to no one, even if it shocks you, until I give you leave ?" "It will not shock me—your news is good," she said, eyeing the dark face keenly. "And of course I will promise. if you wish it ; but your mother ?" "My mother shall know all in time, but not just yet. Listen, Nora, and I will tell you why." She listened without one interruption while he told the full story of his life since he had left Nettleton ; and even when he had reached the end she still sat with her great grey eyes fixed on his face, as though she were trying to read there something more. "Are you shocked, after all, Nora ?" Vance asked at last, a little hurt by her silence. She looked up quickly then. "No," she said, holding out both slim hands, and speaking with a sort of pas- sionate intensity—"no ; I am very, very glad. It is strange work, Vance ; but it is work." "And pretty hard work too !" he in- terrupted, with a slight grimace ; but she did not seem to hear.

How a Wood Engraving is Made.

In wood engraving, the lines that are to ink the paper are left standing, while the parts between are cut away from the surface of the block, so that when an ink roller is passed over an engraving of this kind, it leaves all the lines tipped with a coating of ink, to be picked up by the sheet of paper which comes in contact with it. So, you will see, the wood-en- graver must sink two lines in the block to make one line which will print. Of course, considering the hardness of the wood, and the delicacy required for the lines, this is very slow and tedious work. You may easily form some idea of how tedious it is, by placing a penny over any portion of an engraved picture, making a light mark around the penny with a black lead pencil, and then, by the aid of a magnifying glass, counting the lines with- in the circle.

You will see that your penny has cover- ed more than one hundred lines ; and then you must remember that at every place where the shading in the drawing which the engraver is engraving grows lighter or darker, he has to change the width of the line ; for just in proportion to the thick- ness of the black line left between the two light ones, will be the "tint" or "color" of the corresponding portion of the printed picture. The changes are called by the en- gravers "stops." And where there are many of these, one square inch is a fair day's work.

I have spoken of a drawing, for the en- gravers always have a drawing to work from. Sometimes it is made upon the wood-block, but it is more frequently made by the artist much larger than the block on which it is to be engraved, and a reduced copy of it produced upon the block by photography. By this plan the artist can work more freely, and the en- graver is enabled to have the large draw- ing in front of him, besides the reduced copy of the same which he is cutting in- to lines upon the block.

What is really momentous and all-im- portant with us is the present, by which the future is shaped and colored.

The human intellect has had placed be- fore it by Him who made it one object, and one only, worthy of its efforts, and that is truth. Truth, not only for the sake of any ulterior dignity, however high or holy, but truth for its own sake. We hope, we trust, we humbly believe, that truth will in the end be found to co- incide with goodness, with holiness, with grace, with humility, with all the other noblest aspirations of the human spirit.

WOMAN GOSSIP.

Our Young Women.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, of New York, says: A primal defect in our social life is the notion that girls have nothing to do. Boys are brought up to some employment, but girls to none, except where pecuniary want compels them. The family that is "well off" has busy boys and idle girls. The young man after eating his breakfast, starts off to his daily occupation, and returns at the close of the day. The young woman, after eating her breakfast, usually at a late hour, saunters in quest of amusement. Novels, gossip, shopping for unnecessary trifles, dressing in three or four different costumes, formal visiting, drawing (if able), and lounging are the elements of the young woman's day. In the evening, by way of recreation (?), she goes to the theatre or a ball.

This unequal discipline of the sexes is the basis of innumerable evils. It makes the girl careless and selfish, it turns her mind to personal adornment and other frivolous matters as the great concerns of life; it takes away the sense of responsibility, and produces feebleness and disease in her physical constitution. It also prevents her from asserting her true dignity in the eyes of man, for the life of utility is alone dignified. Women, thus brought up in indolence, are looked upon by men very much as were the women of the old dark times of the world, as mere playthings, expensive toys, not as counselors or friends. Marriage in such circumstances belongs to a low, sensual plane, and the girl is prepared neither in body nor mind for responsibilities which marriage implies. Her training, however, or lack of training, makes it necessary for a long purse to supply her. Economy, helpfulness, co-operation—these are not coming to the new household from this vain source. Dresses, drives, entertainments—these will form the staple demands on the young husband. Accordingly in the city life, where this class of young women is chiefly found, a young man is (greatly to his hurt often) kept from marrying by reason of its costliness, whereas society should be so ordered that marriage would help the larder, not beggar it. We want simplicity of life, frugality, modesty, industry, and system. If we would introduce these virtues into our higher society, we should diminish the despair, envy, jealousy, dissipation, and suicides of the single, and the bickerings, wretchedness, and divorces of the married.

Let our girls have as regular daily duties as the boys. Let idleness be forbidden them. Let recreation be indeed recreation, at proper times and in proper quantities. Let us open more numerous avenues of female industry, and let every with enviable advantages of physique in the way of teeth, eyes, hair, form, and complexion. She has the ability as well as her sterner companion of discerning the laughable side of a subject and cracking a sly joke thereat. European education has greatly improved and instructed the gentler sex of Hawaii, but it must be confessed that it has signally failed to curb the exuberance of their spirits, or tame the impetuosity of their sentiment, or convert them into straightlaced prigs, they whose natures are as boisterous as the bounding billows of their sea-swept rocks.

"CHRIST ON CALVARY."

The New Picture by Munkaczy to Be Exhibited in Paris.

The subject of Munkaczy's new picture is "Christ on Calvary." This solemn and touching picture, says the Paris correspondent of the London Times, which will be exhibited at Easter, will certainly produce as great an impression in the artistic world as "Christ Before Pilate." The two pictures will be exhibited alongside each other, and the public will be able to follow the sequence of the master's artistic thought. The figure of "Christ on Calvary" is slightly larger than "Christ Before Pilate."

The painter depicts the scene where the Saviour has just expired. The sky is black with clouds and streaked with lightning, and beyond the horizon at Jerusalem the veil of the temple is seen, rent in twain. Jesus Christ, pale in death, and inclined forward, has given up the ghost. The centurion has dropped in terror beside the cross. Mary, the mother, on her knees, is bathing in tears her son's feet. Mary Magdalene, her golden hair hanging loosely over her shoulders, her face in her hands, is also on her knees before the cross. John, overwhelmed with grief, is on the other side, and a Jewish woman looks on, a sad spectator of the crucifixion.

The terrified crowd is descending the hill. Some Roman cavalry look on ashamed. One of the executioners, a man of brutal mien, shouldering the ladder and axe in hand, is carried along by the multitude. The three crosses are in the foreground at the right extremity, and the rest of the magnificent canvas is filled by the fleeing multitude. The sky is magnificent and sombre, and the lightning illuminates the dark clouds that hang over the mountains, the valley and the scarcely visible town. One sees, amid the confused movement of the crowd, that it is bewildered and terror-stricken. The group at the foot of the cross is of wonderful beauty and feeling, and the general color is harmonious and striking to a degree which even Munkaczy himself has never before attained. This picture is ments—these will form the staple demands on the young husband. Accordingly in the city life, where this class of young women is chiefly found, a young man is (greatly to his hurt often) kept from marrying by reason of its costliness, whereas society should be so ordered that marriage would help the larder, not beggar it. We want simplicity of life, frugality, modesty, industry, and system.

If we would introduce these virtues into our higher society, we should diminish
the despair, envy, jealousy, dissipation,
and suicides of the single, and the bickerings, wretchedness, and divorces of the married.

Let our girls have as regular daily duties as the boys. Let idleness be for-bidden them. Let recreation be indeed recreation, at proper times and in proper quantities. Let us open more numerous avenues of female industry, and let every woman be clothed with the dignity of a useful life. Can such a reformation be brought about? My dear madame, begin it yourself. Rule your household on this principle. Have courage to defy fashion where it opposes. Be a bold leader in this reform, and you will soon see a host of followers glad to cease from the old folly.

Respectability of Work.

As a rule, the ladies who scorn to earn money do not scorn to take it as a gift, says a lady writer. Their natural protectors gone, they will quarter themselves on any relative who will open his house for them—a cousin, a cousin's cousin—any small plea of relationship is sufficient. They will actually go a-begging in a delicate and dainty way among friends, and receive anything anyone chooses to give. And it is well known to every one that any offer of marriage to one of them which promises a comfortable home will be accepted. This is the best end to be hoped for, but if the girls are not attractive, they pass from one long-suffering relative to another until they are "brought into" old ladies' homes or placed in genteel institutions, where they still boast with their latest breath of their gentility, and are as proud of never having earned a penny as they should be ashamed of it. Certainly there are fewer such women in the world today than there were twenty years ago,
but there are still enough to shame good,
independent girls out of efforts in which they should be encouraged, with the old bugaboo story that "ladies never work for a livelihood." Ladies do, ladies will,
if there is any need of it; for a true lady would rather do anything honest than be an object of charity; and, in a womanly way quite consistent with all feminine charms, rejoices in the possibility of independence.

Women and Poetry.

In every age, says the London Academy, women have been excelled in poetry by side, and a Jewish woman looks on, a sad spectator of the crucifixion.

The terrified crowd is descending the hill. Some Roman cavalry look on ashamed. One of the executioners, a man of brutal mien, shouldering the ladder and axe in hand, is carried along by the multitude. The three crosses are in the foreground at the right extremity, and the rest of the magnificent canvas is filled by the fleeing multitude. The sky is magnificent and sombre, and the lightning illuminates the dark clouds that hang over the mountains, the valley and the scarcely visible town. One sees, amid the confused movement of the crowd, that it is bewildered and terror-stricken. The group at the foot of the cross is of wonderful beauty and feeling, and the general color is harmonious and striking to a degree which even Munkaczy himself has never before attained. This picture is certainly one of the most perfect which have been produced for many a year,
combining all the majesty of the classic schools with the modern and personal stamp that makes it of the nineteenth century.

In Camp at Suakim.

A letter from Suakim to the London Daily News says: Our camp is gradually assuming a business like appearance.
Every hour of the day cavalry, infantry,
and, at last, the artillery, may be seen parading and drilling. The intrenchments have been strengthened. Pickets and vedettes are regularly thrown out, a precaution which no Egyptian ever dreamed of. The ambulance department is getting into working order; and the heliographers are learning the elements of their art. Gangs of laborers are leveling the ground, filling up malodorous ditches, and preparing additional camp room. One of these gangs is wholly composed of convicts, who work with heavy fettters on their legs. They have been condemned for robbery, murder, and rebellion. One sometimes sees a chained convict lounging about at his ease in the bazaar, or in the tumble-down alleys of the island quarter. His fettters are a sufficient guarantee against his running away, and his gaolers feel easy of him. When he is tired of sight-seeing, he goes straggling home to prison, or perhaps his custodian may come out to fetch him in which case they discuss the news of the day as they go along. The convicts take life as easily in camp as out of it. It was amusing to watch one of them as he carried a basketful of earth to one of the ditches.
He bore the basket on his head. It leaked copiously down the laborer's back. The laborer was far too lazy to stop and repair the loss, and he reached his ditch with an ounce or two of rubbish, which he heaved
in with as much deliberation as if it weighed a hundred-weight.

Yesterday afternoon, shortly before sunset, the whole camp was turned out to oppose an imaginary enemy. It would have been interesting to see how the men tion Cristine had always envied the possession of which she had innocently proud. They were her jewels.

Of course, considering the hardness of the wood, the delicacy required for the work is very slow and tedious work. The tint will be the "tint" or "color" of the printing portion of the printed line. The changes are called by the engravers "tops." And where there are no lines, one square inch is a fair spoken of a drawing, for the engraver has a drawing to work upon. Sometimes it is made upon the stone, but it is more frequently the artist much larger than the drawing it is to be engraved, and a copy of it produced upon the stone by photography. By this plan the work is done more freely, and the engraver is enabled to have the large drawing of him, besides the reduced size, the same which he is cutting in the block.

Women and Poetry.

In every age, says the London Academy, women have been excelled in poetry by men. Coleridge used to say that a woman's head was generally over ears in her heart; and if the heart be the seat of poetry, women ought, on hypothesis, to be the best poets. But to employ Mr. Robertson's simile, it is experience filtering through the heart that gives us great poetry; and of the deepest and widest experience women, in the nature of our social life, know less than men. They are often endowed with a larger capacity for joyousness, and sometimes with a deeper well of potentiality for suffering, but they see less and feel less than the other sex; and because they live less they must be less great where greatness depends largely on great experience. Mr. Robertson urges other reasons for the poetic inferiority of women, and prominent among these is the old-fashioned doctrine of the domestic mission of women which makes children the best poems that Providence meant to produce. This is not begging the question. True, it may be that no less than sixty women are now living who write verse that would have made, in some sort, the reputations of as many men as many years ago. But to the clear question—Have women been excelled by men in poetry?—no amount of chivalry will enable a critic to give any but a blunt and barbarous reply.

Hawaiian Beauties.

The Hawaiian lady is described as a voluptuous, good-humored, soft-hearted, sweet-tempered, tender-eyed, merry-making creature, of a fascinating form and most languishing, longing, admiration-seeking, yet demure, cast of countenance, of their art. Gangs of laborers are leveling the ground, filling up malodorous ditches, and preparing additional camp room. One of these gangs is wholly composed of convicts, who work with heavy fetters on their legs. They have been condemned for robbery, murder, and rebellion. One sometimes sees a chained convict lounging about at his ease in the bazaar, or in the tumble-down alleys of the island quarter. His fetters are a sufficient guarantee against his running away, and his gaolers feel easy of him. When he is tired of sight-seeing, he goes straggling home to prison, or perhaps his custodian may come out to fetch him in which case they discuss the news of the day as they go along. The convicts take life as easily in camp as out of it. It was amusing to watch one of them as he carried a basketful of earth to one of the ditches. He bore the basket on his head. It leaked copiously down the laborer's back. The laborer was far too lazy to stop and repair the loss, and he reached his ditch with an ounce or two of rubbish, which he heaved in with as much deliberation as if it weighed a hundred-weight.

Yesterday afternoon, shortly before sunset, the whole camp was turned out to oppose an imaginary enemy. It would have been interesting to see how the men and officers would have behaved under a surprise. The general, however, did not put them to the test. He wanted to see how they could get themselves into position, and as they knew what was coming, they got through their work creditably. Within a very short time after the sounding of the alarm the long line of entrenchments bristled with rifles; the cavalry were drawn up in readiness for an imaginary pursuit, and the gunners stood manfully by their Krupps and Gatlings. The general and his staff then rode the entire circuit of entrenchments, and the show was over.

The Arabs.

Only those who have been to Suez can realise the physical strength of the Arab. Natives on the look-out for a job at Suez and other places will carry weights of merchandise few Englishmen can tackle. An officer of a P. and O. mail steamer says that there are few Arabs—"stevedores"—that would find any difficulty in carrying loads of from three to four hundred weight each. One Arab, well known to all on board the crack mail-ship, has carried as much as seven hundredweight. The Arab donkey—"boys" at Alexandria and Suez run behind their "fares" to the end of the journey without stopping, and will return at once if requested. It is customary for about half a dozen "boys" to have as many as twenty donkeys under their charge. A "boy" frequently takes up an ass under his arm and carries it some little distance. They name the animals Lefroy, Lamson, Miller, and so forth.

WHY DAN DRANK.

BY EMILY CLEMENS PEARSON.

As Captain Holden opened his barn door very early one summer morning, a forlorn young man arose from the hay loft and stammered :

"Got any work for me, Cap'n?"

"You want work? Well, well, we'll see. Go into the house and get breakfast, and when the six mule team comes back you can rub and feed 'em and start off with another load." He well knew Dan's ability when not under the influence of drink, for he had often employed him.

Dan started for the house, but felt no appetite. His head ached to bursting, and he trembled nervously. As he entered the house he met kind Mrs. Holden, who, seeing his condition, invited him to sit down and she would bring him a cup of strong coffee.

"Thank you kindly, ma'am, I would like a cup of coffee," replied Dan.

"Shall I get you something to eat?"

"Thank you, I cannot eat," he replied.

"O Dan!" exclaimed the lady, as she took a seat opposite him at the table, "you are killing yourself. Why don't you stop drinking?"

"I know I ought to, ma'am. I've wasted thousands of dollars just to paint the drunkard's sign on my face, and to fill me with aches and pains."

"Why don't you turn over a new leaf, and stop at once?"

"I did stop once," said Dan, "and signed the pledge, and didn't drink a drop for four years and six months. Then something happened to discourage me, and I took to drinking worse than ever. I had the delirium tremens and suffered horribly; no tongue can tell how much."

"But how came you to break your pledge?" asked the lady.

"Let me go back and tell about my life. I never have had any home, or anybody to help me. My mother died when I was three years old, and my father when I was four years. I grew up in the stables with the hostlers, and learned to drink when I was a youngster. I don't know what possessed me. Perhaps it was in the blood."

"When I was seventeen years old my uncle died and left me ten thousand dollars. Then I gave up and spent more than half of it before I took a rest. When I saw Mary McKenzie, I grew sober, for I loved her. She promised to marry me. I was twenty-four, and had a good salary as head hostler in a large livery stable."

"I thought the world of Mary. She was rosy, merry, and smarter than lightning. I could kiss the ground she trod on."

"I said to her one evening as we went to walk :—

When next Mrs. Holden saw him and asked him how he was getting along he replied :—

"I'm all right ma'am. I haven't touched a drop for a month, and I've had two or three chances a day. I thank you for speaking to me in time. God is kindly helping me."

A year has passed and Dan's good record is going on.

How Intelligence Progresses.

From the lowest to the highest creatures, intelligence progresses by acts of discriminations; and it continues so to progress among men, from the most ignorant to the most cultured. To class rightly—to put in the same group things which are of essentially the same natures, and other groups things of natures essentially different—is the fundamental condition to right guidance of actions. Beginning with rudimentary vision, which gives warning that some large opaque body is passing near (just as closed eyes turned to the window, perceiving the shade caused by a hand put before them, tell us of something moving in front,) the advance is to developed vision, by exactly-appreciated combinations of forms, colors, and motions, identifies objects at great distances as prey or enemies of this or that kind, and so makes possible adjustments of conduct for securing food or evading death. That progressing perception of differences and consequent greater correctness of classing constitutes, under one of its chief aspects the development of mind, is equally seen when we pass from the relatively simple physical vision to the relatively complex intellectual vision—the vision through the agency of which things previously grouped by certain external resemblances or by certain extrinsic circumstances come to be more truly grouped in conformity with their intrinsic structures or natures. Undeveloped intellectual vision is just as indiscriminating and erroneous in its classings as undeveloped physical vision. Instance the early arrangements of plants under the heads trees, shrubs, and herbs; size, the most conspicuous trait, being the ground of distinction, and the assemblages formed being such as united many plants extremely unlike in their natures, and separated others that are near akin. Or still better, take the popular classification which puts together under the same general name fish and shell-fish, and under the sub-name, shell-fish, puts together crustaceans and mollusks; nay, which goes further, and regards as fish the cetacean mammals. Partly because of the likeness in their modes of life as inhabiting the water, and partly because of some general resemblance in their tastes, creatures that are in their essential natures far more widely

"'All right,' said she, blushing with a bright smile."

"Then I said, 'There is $750 which I have drawn from the bank (and I gave her a package), get what housekeeping things we want. The house is ready, No. 10, Park street.'

"'All right,' said she, taking the package smiling and blushing, 'you're a jewel, Dan.'

"I felt well paid by her loving smile and handsome speech."

"'To-morrow night,' said I, 'if it is pleasant, we will meet under this window and go and get married.'

"She agreed to this, and I saw her to her boarding house."

"Mary false! Then the world was all dark to me. I wanted to die. I went back to drinking to drown my trouble."

"I am very sorry for you, Dan," said Mrs. Holden. "But what a blessing you did not marry her! It was well that you found out that she was false in time."

"Yes, yes, I know it," replied Dan, "but the poor thing only lived a month after she went away, and I forgave her."

"I will tell you one thing," said Mrs. Holden, "troubles are not intended to upset us, but is to make us patient. If you had gone to God with your trial He would have blessed you and made a

Assessing the Damages.

A few weeks since a railroad collision on one of the roads leading out of New York killed, among others, a passenger living in an interior town. His remains were sent home in good shape, and a few days after the funeral the attorney of the road called upon the widow to effect a settlement. She placed her figures at $20,000.

"Oh, that sum is unreasonable," replied the attorney. "Your husband was nearly fifty years old?"

"Yes, sir."

"And lame?"

"Yes."

"And his general health was poor?"

"Quite poor."

"And he probably could not have lived over five years?"

"Probably not, sir."

"Then it seems to me that two or three thousand dollars would be a fair compensation."

"Two or three thousand," she echoed.

"Why, sir, I courted that man for ten years, run after him for ten more, and then had to chase him down with a shot gun to get him before a preacher. Do you suppose that I'm going to settle for the bare cost of shoe leather and ammunition?"

Soap-Bubble Parties.

Soap-bubble parties are the latest. Twenty or thirty clay pipes, for as many young ladies and gentlemen, have ribbons of different colors for every two, and are separated in equal piles, from which each person selects one, and, by matching colors, finds a partner, so to speak, for the blowing. On a medium-sized table stands a bowl of soap and water.

Highlanders. It is not a common thing for a crowned head to write books, and they do so every one is at once convinced that what is written. The other day the Queen, published years ago, had a very large sale; a good deal commented upon at the time, but they have long since gone out. They were written in a kindly spirit, were carefully edited by a good man, but not much more could be said about them.

The Queen and her family have evidence of a good deal of taste in literature and fine arts. Her Majesty has indulged in book writing, and her daughters are credited with much of literature, and they have all, it is said, painted so as to excite considerable admiration. The sons except the eldest, have given evidence of more taste for manly sports and vigorous than for fine arts. Prince Alfred is certainly a man of fine literary attainments, as many of his published works plainly show, and it is said that he has a great deal of fatherly pains to take in the taste of his children in their studies.

"'I will tell you one thing,' said Mrs. Holden, 'troubles are not intended to upset us, but is to make us patient. If you had gone to God with your trial He would have blessed you and made a strong man of you.'

"'I suppose He would,' said Dan. Mrs. Holden saw with clear perception that when one makes apology for wrong doing one seldom gives an honest excuse, and she said:—

"'Dan, you give your dreadful trial as excuse for drinking, but it is not the right excuse. Back of all you loved liquor, and you took to drinking because you loved it. Isn't that so?'

"'I'm hit! It's just so,' said Dan.

"'You are not alone, Dan,' said the lady, 'in framing an excuse for evil doing. Farmer Jones says he needs liquor to help him in haying time. He loves liquor, and it is always 'haying time' with him.'

"'Tim Carroll, teamster, gives as his excuse that he is so pestered with rheumatism that he cannot do without it. A false reason; it poisons his blood, stiffens his muscles and sinews. His simple explanation should be 'I love it.'"

"'George Lewis, blacksmith, has found out that his well is foul, and the water does not agree with him, and so he drinks cider and brandy or something alcoholic. Mark my words, hard drinkers deceive themselves with pretences. You say you went back to wickedness because you were disappointed in love.'

"'I own up. If I hadn't loved liquor I'd have left it alone,' said Dan.

"'Now Dan,' said Mrs. Holden, 'if you ask God to help you He will surely do it, and you can stop drinking. Will you ask Him?'

"'I will,' and Dan having finished his coffee, with firm resolve went out to his teaming, praying mentally, "O God, please help me!"

He had more of the courage and bearing of a man than he had had for many a day.

"Quite poor."

"And he probably could not have lived over five years?"

"Probably not, sir."

Twenty or thirty clay pipes, for as many young ladies and gentlemen, have ribbons of different colors for every two, and are separated in equal piles, from which each person selects one, and, by matching colors, finds a partner, so to speak, for the blowing. On a medium-sized table stands a bowl of soap and water. The partners in turn blow bubbles, trying three times, amid the efforts of the others to annoy and embarrass them. The one whose bubble remains unbroken the longest is entitled to a prize.

Some prizes are painted plush shaving and handkerchief cases, painted picture frames, Russian leather toilet cases, blotters, plush boxes of writing-paper, and others are tasteful and useful mementoes. At a recent party all bore the date of the evening in gilt letters. The prizes are sometimes expensive jewellery. There is always a special prize given to the one whose bubble has lasted the longest of all. A judge selected before the blowing announces the decisions. After all have blown their bubbles, the prizes are drawn by numbers. Then come the usual dances and a supper.—New York Sun.

French Juries.

The first business of the assizes in France is to draw the juries. A panel of forty jurymen is summoned, and the prisoners are all brought up one by one into the President's room to see the drawing done. For each trial fourteen names are drawn by lot—that is, twelve to form the jury and two others to act as substitutes in case one of the jury should fall ill. These substitutes are sworn like the rest, and they sit in the jury-box, but take no part in finding the verdict, unless they are required to fill up vacancies. This system of having a couple of extra men on a jury is evidently more sensible than the English plan of empanelling just the number needed.

Fear and awe are only weak chains to secure love; when these fetters are broken, the man who forgets to fear will begin to show the effects of his hatred.

The Western Floods.

What terrible devastations are the unfortunate inhabitants of the Western States, especially along the Mississippi and the Ohio! Between tremendous snow blockades and the great floods, and the irremediable losses, the property and the lives of people are in almost constant peril. Each season appears to bring with it own peculiar misfortunes. Not weeks ago the daily papers told of stories of the great snow their results. Last week the accounts of nearly two thousand persons lost, and many houses being swept by a few hours cyclone, and the probabilities are that during the entire such visitations will often come every morning we have additional evening news about the terrible. What havoc those floods are and how impossible it appears to the inhabitants to escape them!

All these things should be read to the Canadian who makes deductions of "the Western fever." His Canadian home may not have all the fascinations his fancy has for "the West," it certainly has nothing like the drawbacks and the man who cannot manage to comfortably on a fair Canadian fare not expect to add much to his comforts by moving West.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONY.—Liebke's authority in matters of health and which are good to eat and drink wrote:—"Sherry and strong more quickly intoxicating than the quality of wines, and they have influence on the gastric juices of the stomach."

OVER THE CATARACT.

The Current Leading to Death's Whirlpool, and How a Prominent Man Avoided It.

(Albany, N. Y., Journals)

Among the hundreds of thousands of tourists who have visited Niagara Falls and stood in awe before its miracle of power, there is, probably, not one who has failed to notice the large stone building which stands directly opposite the cataract and a short distance below the railroad suspension and cantilever bridges. This building is known to all as the "Monteagle House," and it has been a popular place of resort for hundreds of travellers during many years. Nearly every place in America possessing unusual natural scenery has its legend, and a most tragical one is located on the site where this stone building now stands. Monteagle, a young chieftain of the Miami Indians, loved the daughter of a mighty chief among the Iroquois. His wooing, unlike that of Hiawatha, was not received with favor by the father chief, and hence he was compelled to resort to the usual method of abduction and flight. The escaping pair were overtaken on the banks of the Niagara where the hotel now stands, and rather than submit to capture the lovers cast themselves into the cataract below. Their bodies were subsequently found at the mouth of the river clasped in an embrace which even the cataract could not sunder. Many occurrences since that time have tended to make the Monteagle famous, and it was with surprise that it was learned a short time since that the edifice was to be entirely transformed, rearranged and refurnished for the benefit of tourists, and especially invalids.

Feeling that this is a subject in which the public would take unusual interest, especially as the National Park question is being so strongly agitated, a representative of this paper visited Niagara Falls yesterday and learned the following facts:

Dr. W. R. Crumb, who is about undertaking this important task, is a gentleman who is well known throughout the land, having successfully practiced medicine in the city of Buffalo for nearly thirty years. He is exceedingly well preserved, though nearly 60 years of age, while his energy and ambition are something wonderful. In conversation with the reporter he said:

"I anticipate great success here, although a few years ago I should not have dared undertake it, for I was then what people call 'a dead man.'"

"How was that, Doctor? How did it occur?"

"It was brought about, as such troubles usually are, by mental and physical depression, arising out of troubles and reverses. The mind has a remarkable effect upon the body, and when one meets with misfortunes financially, or in any other form they are apt to be accompanied by misfortunes physically. Such, at all events, was my case. I was irritable, restless and feverish. I had a heavy and irregular pulse, my food did not assimilate, my heart would throb violently and then stop and the fluids I passed were profuse, high colored and thick with

Highlanders. It is not a common thing for a crowned head to write books, and when they do so every one is at once curious to know what is written. The other books written by the Queen, published some years ago, had a very large sale and were a good deal commented upon at the time, but they have long since gone out of notice. They were written in a kindly spirit and were carefully edited by a good literary man, but not much more could be said about them.

The Queen and her family have given evidence of a good deal of taste for literature and fine arts. Her Majesty alone has indulged in book writing, but her daughters are credited with much love of literature, and they have all, or nearly all, painted so as to excite considerable admiration. The sons except the youngest, have given evidence of more taste for manly sports and vigorous exercise than for fine arts. Prince Albert was certainly a man of fine literary attainments, as many of his published speeches plainly show, and it is said that he took a great deal of fatherly pains to cultivate the taste of his children in that direction.

"It was brought about, as such troubles usually are, by mental and physical depression, arising out of troubles and reverses. The mind has a remarkable effect upon the body, and when one meets with misfortunes socially, or in any other form they are likely to be accompanied by misfortunes physically. Such, at all events, was my case. I was irritable, restless and feverish. I had a heavy and irregular pulse, my food did not assimilate, my heart would throb violently and then stop and the fluids I passed were profuse, high-colored and thick with leposits. I was obliged to abandon my practice, and also to suspend pushing my valuable invention, known as 'Crumb's pocket inhaler,' for the cure of catarrh and asthma."

"How long did this continue?"

"For about two years. I realized that I was quite sick but like everyone else I felt it would only be temporary. The majority of people drift along the way a man might who know nothing about these great Falls and drifting with the current. It is so to drift, you see. At the end of a year, however, my condition became simply horrible. I had a serious irritation of the throat, a hard, sluggish pulse, a swelling of the limbs and numbness extending down the thigh. I had terrible night sweats and my urine was loaded with albumen and acids. I called in several of the most skillful physicians but I continued to sink rapidly. I was the victim of Bright's disease of the kidneys, and I looked forward with almost certainty to a few weeks of terrible agony and then death!" * * * It is painful to describe this experience and it is sufficient to say that I am entirely well and that my life has been saved by means of Warner's Safe Cure, which arrested the disease, effected a cure and has preserved me in health ever since.

"Ten it was this remedy that saved your life, doctor?"

"Yes, I can testify from a grateful heart that it is invaluable for men or women who are depressed by reason of disappointments and reverses; who are losing flesh and strength and who must find relief or a fatal termination awaits them. I prescribe this great remedy to my patients constantly and the wonderful effects I observed in my own case I see repeated in their experiences. It is this that makes me certain I can endure the care of the great Sanitarium I am about to establish."

The Western Floods.

What terrible devastations are visiting the unfortunate inhabitants of the Western States, especially along the Mississippi and the Ohio! Between the tremendous snow blockades and avalanches,
the great floods, and the irresistible cyclones, the property and the lives of the people are in almost constant jeopardy.
Each season appears to bring with it its own peculiar misfortunes. Not many weeks ago the daily papers told harrowing stories of the great snow falls and their results. Last week the account was of nearly two thousand persons suffering loss, and many houses being swept away
by a few hours cyclone, and the probabilities are that during the entire season such visitations will often come. Now, every morning we have additional sickening news about the terrible floods.
What havoc those floods are creating,
and how impossible it appears to be for the inhabitants to escape them!

All these things should be suggestive reading to the Canadian who may feel indications of "the Western fever." If his Canadian home may not have about it all the fascinations his fancy has painted for "the West," it certainly has not any thing like the drawbacks and dangers.
The man who cannot manage to live comfortably on a fair Canadian farm need not expect to add much to personal comforts by moving West.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONY.—Liebig, an authority in matters of health and things which are good to eat and drink, thus wrote:—"Sherry and strong cider are more quickly intoxicating than the generality of wines, and they have a peculiar influence on the gastric juices of the stomach."

Men's lives should be like the day's,
more beautiful in the evening; or like
the spring, aglow with promise; or like
the autumn, rich with golden sheaves,
where good works and deeds have ripened
on the field.

boys, and I looked forward with almost certainty to a few weeks of terrible agony and

descrie this experience and it is sufficient to say that I am entirely well and that my life has been saved by means of Warner's Safe Cure, which arrested the disease, effected a cure and has preserved me in health ever since.

"Ten it was this remedy that saved
your life, doctor?"

"Yes, I can testify from a grateful heart
that it is invaluable for men or women who are depressed by reason of disappoint-

own case I see repeated in their experiences.
It is this that makes me certain I can endure
the trial of the great Sanitarium I am about to establish."

Tennyson Enraged.

Tennyson passes most of his days at Farrinford, surrounded by the lovely and romantic scenery for which the Isle of Wight is noted. He spends on an average six to eight hours a day in his library engaged in literary work. Orders are always given that he shall not be disturbed except for most momentous reasons and he never is; for the members of his family and his servants think his mang of a line of quite as much importance as the creation of a new world—an opinion which, it is needless to say, he fully shares. Perhaps if his wife
—she is Emily Shellwood—were dying
she might venture to have him informed of the fact during his hours of work. She would not be willing that his sanctuary should be profaned by any less cause, because she religiously believes that William Shakspeare is scarcely the equal of Alfred Tennyson. If she were capable of forming or cherishing any other opinion,
it is doubtful if he would live with her.
She probably preserves her connubial place by the most rapturous worship and the most absolute effacement. There have been some awful instances of invasions of Tennyson's library while he was in the throes of composition, owing to the relaxed vigilance of his domestic dragons. The scenes that followed can hardly be described. The poet, in his wrath, red like mad, threatening to destroy the intruder, and literally tearing the little air he has left. The very idea of interrupting Alfred Tennyson in his hours of fine inspiration seemed to be monstrous beyond belief, a hideous crime eternally unpardonable. He has never,
I believe made any physical assault upon an unfortunate intruder, though it would have been supposed, from his furious demonstrations, that he could be appeased with nothing short of homicide.

FOR THE Kidneys, Liver, and Urinary Organs. THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—wherever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver.
To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its

—Mr. S. McLaughlin is doing a rushing business in his new premises. Fair day his store was crowded to its utmost capacity. He has been giving some rare bargains lately and he assures us there are more to follow. Look for his announcement next week.

—The late Conference of the C. M. Church required that during the year a sermon on temperance be preached in all the churches of the Dominion. The Rev. M. L. Pearson, pastor of the C. M. Church in this town, will therefore take "Temperance" as his subject next Sunday evening.

—At a masquerade carnival held in the skating rink at Markham, Ont., on Tuesday evening of last week, Fred Lafferty, printer, formerly of Napanee, obtained 2nd prize, scarf pin, for costume. He appeared as "Brudner Gardner, President of the Lime Kiln Club."

—On Sunday last a gang of men were engaged all day in making the bridge, which was broken by the late accident in North Fredericksburgh last week, more secure and firm. The accident was caused by a broken rail, not a broken wheel as previously stated. The bridge is now in a safe condition. The loss to the G. T. R. Company by the accident will be about $15,000.

—The event in the new Opera House next week will be the return, by special request, of the Tavernier Comedy Co., of which Miss Ida Van Cortland is the leading light. The Company is one of the best travelling and is deserving of large audiences. The bill for Wednesday night is "Under the Gaslight," and that for Thursday is "Two Nights in Rome." Reserved seats are now on sale at J. J. Perry's drug store.

—After a painful illness of erysipelas and other disorders extending over several weeks, Mary, wife of Robt. Denison, Esq., passed away on Wednesday. The deceased lady was kind, affectionate and a most devoted christian. Her loss will be felt elsewhere as well as in the home circle. The bereaved husband has the heartfelt sympathy of a large number of friends and relatives. The funeral takes place to-day at 1 p.m.

—Mr. Thos. Jamieson left town Sunday for North Gore on a visit to his brother Jas. Jamieson, who is seriously ill of tion. Mr. Jamieson returned home morning.

—Mr. Chas. Brownlee has returned from and again presides over the bibulistic dep the Cornell House. As a compounder of coctions he is an expert, and an all round low. Many friends welcome him back.

—Mr. Robert Martin of Richmond last week for Manitoba. He will take with him a carload of horses for sale there. He will there this summer on his farm. His Mr. Charles Martin, has resided all Manitoba.

—Mr. Samson Davy of Wilton left today for Palermo, Halton County, who purchased a farm, he having disposed property in this county. His family will be with him next week. We regret the removal of a resident of the county. We heartily recommend him to the people.

—We had the pleasure of a call ago from Mr. W. D. Timmerman of R., who is in town the guest of Mr. K. He was stationed last year at Calgary foot of the Rockies, but has been transferred to the eastern division—the Ontario & Q. He will be given a station on this line course of a month or so. He is an ex-railroader and thoroughly reliable.

Round About Us.

—Messrs. Rathbun & Co., Deseronto chased the schooner "Agnes Hope," Hope parties.

—Rafael Garratt, formerly of Bell cently died at Lima, Peru, leaving a wife and three children in destitute circumstances.

—The hotel-keepers of Kingston have to take out licenses from both the Ontario and Dominion. They will pay $15 fee to the Inspector under protest.

—The engineers surveying the bridge from Yarker to the K. & P. Railway a route which will avoid engineering at Napanee.

—On Tuesday evening, March 18th, there will be a pancake social in the M. E. Church. Particulars next week.

—This is a good sample copy of THE EXPRESS to send to your friends. Induce them to subscribe. They will never regret it.

—A man who lost a half barrel of fish on the Richmond road Monday night can recover the same on applying to Dr. Cowan, John-st.

—McAlister is now showing two hundred ready-made suits in men's, youths' and boys' sizes.

—Thursday evening of last week a basket social was held in the Napanee Lodge room, I.O.G.T. A pleasant evening was spent. Proceeds $14.

—A meeting of the lacrosse club will be held at the Huffman House this (Friday) evening at 7 o'clock, for reorganization for the season of '84.

—A son of Mr. Richard Woodcock, of Richmond, while cutting wood, Monday last, let the axe slip and one of his toes was summarily amputated.

—Mr. Thos. Jamieson has material on the ground for the erection of another patent oven. Mr. Jamieson will in a short time have one of the most complete bakeries in the district.

—The "Palace Grocery" is the pretentious name of Mr. D. L. Paul's establishment at Bath, but we understand it is deserving of the title. It is neat, well stocked and prices are satisfactory. See advertisement elsewhere.

—Fair day passed off quietly, though there was a fair display of "drunks." The cattle show consisted of a yoke of oxen and a couple of cows. The March fair has evidently degenerated into a day for horse trading and carousing. This should not be.

—We would call the attention of the residents of Bath and surrounding country to the announcement of Mr. C. Cummins in another column. Mr. C. is one of the most enterprising dealers in the county and carries a stock which for assortment, quality and price, compares favorably with the largest houses of Kingston and Napanee. He is noted for square dealing. You cannot do better than give him a call.

—While crossing Lucas' bridge, North Fredericksburgh, on Tuesday last, Mrs. Nelson Unger was thrown from a cutter and sustained a compound fracture of the nose. Portions of the bone protruded so much that they had to be removed. Dr. Clark dressed the wound and entertains hopes of it healing without disfigurement.

—As Mr. T. D. Creighton, son and daughter were driving home from town, Wednesday evening, the horses took fright at a locomotive at Mooney's crossing and ran away. Mr. Creighton was thrown against a barbed wire fence and dragged a considerable distance. The barbs cut him terribly about the head and body, inflicting serious wounds, which required the attendance of Dr. Clark, of Napanee. His mouth was torn back to the angle of the lower jaw. Several stitches had to be put in the wounds. Fortunately the other occupants escaped injury, though Mr. Creighton, jr., had his clothes badly torn by the barbs. Many friends will wish Mr. Creighton speedy recovery.

—A son of Napanee, obtained a prize, scarf pin, for costume. He appeared as "Brudner Gardner, President of the Lime Kiln Club."

—On Sunday last a gang of men were engaged all day in making the bridge, which was broken by the late accident in North Fredericksburgh last week, more secure and firm. The accident was caused by a broken rail, not a broken wheel as previously stated. The bridge is now in a safe condition. The loss to the G. T. R. Company, by the accident will be about $15,000.

—The event in the new Opera House next week will be the return, by special request, of the Tavernier Comedy Co., of which Miss Ida Van Cortland is the leading light. The Company is one of the best travelling and is deserving of large audiences. The bill for Wednesday night is "Under the Gaslight," and that for Thursday is "Two Nights in Rome." Reserved seats are now on sale at J. J. Perry's drug store.

—After a painful illness of erysipelas and other disorders extending over several weeks, Mary, wife of Robt. Denison, Esq., passed away on Wednesday. The deceased lady was kind, affectionate and a most devoted christian. Her loss will be felt elsewhere as well as in the home circle. The bereaved husband has the heartfelt sympathy of a large number of friends and relatives. The funeral takes place to-day at 1 p.m.

The "Boss" and his "Wicked Pardner."

According to the Mail report of A. H. Roe's speech in the Legislature he said that he had sat in a hotel sitting-room on Sundays in Napanee and saw men go into the bar sober and come out drunk.

There can be no doubt this is true. Roe was up to a couple of months ago interested in the Brisco House and had a "wicked pardner." Perhaps it was this "wicked pardner" who was dealing out the grog and raking in the dimes while the saintly Roe sat on guard in the sitting-room against a surprise from the Inspector. To hear him tell the story, though, no one who did not know the man, would suspect he would be a party to so infamous a transaction. Yet it is within the range of probability that he was. The only hotel sitting-room he was in the habit of sitting in was the one mentioned above. Mr. Roe should not expose himself in this way. It is not sharp—and everybody knows he aims to pose as a very sharp man.

SALE REGISTER.

(The above sale has been cancelled.)

THURSDAY, MARCH 20TH.—Mr. James Storms, auctioneer, has received instructions from Mr. Isaac Asseltine, lot 49 in the 6th concession of the township of Camden, one mile east of Moscow, all his farm stock and implements. Sale commences at 1 o'clock p.m., sharp.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26TH.—Mr. Jas. Allen, auctioneer, will sell at the residence of Geo. W. Garrison, Lot No. 22 in the 4th Con. of the Township of Fredericksburgh, at 1 o'clock, p.m., his goods and chattels.

(Parties getting their sale bills printed at this office are entitled to a notice similar to the above free of charge.)

—Mr. Robert Martin of Richmond let week for Manitoba. He will take with him a carload of horses for sale there. He will there this summer on his farm. His Mr. Charles Martin, has resided all in Manitoba.

—Mr. Samson Davy of Wilton left on day for Palermo, Halton County, where purchased a farm, he having disposed property in this county. His family will be with him next week. We regret the removal of a good resident of the county. We heartily recommend him to the people of the county.

—We had the pleasure of a call a few days ago from Mr. W. D. Timmerman of 1 R., who is in town the guest of Mr. K. R. He was stationed last year at Calgary, foot of the Rockies, but has been transferred to the eastern division—the Ontario & Quebec. He will be given a station on this line in the course of a month or so. He is an experienced railroad engineer and thoroughly reliable.

Round About Us.

—Messrs. Rathbun & Co., Deseronto, have chased the schooner "Agnes Hope," 1 Hope parties.

—Rafael Garratt, formerly of Bellefleur, recently died at Lima, Peru, leaving a wife and three children in destitute circumstances.

—The hotel-keepers of Kingston have taken out licenses from both the Ontario and Dominion. They will pay $15 fee to the Inspector under protest.

—The engineers surveying the branch from Yarker to the K. & P. Railway have a route which will avoid engineering at Yarker, where it will be difficult to construct a permanent bridge across the Napanee River. It is stated that a much easier line can be started from the Napanee and Tamworth way north of Colebrook and running a Napanee River near Petworth, and north-easterly to the Kingston & Penarthington.

—On Tuesday last as Mr. George H. Kingston, was on his way to dinner struck by a pilot engine on the K. & P. way and knocked senseless. He was internally, but not fatally.

—Tuesday morning while a cow was taken from Verona to Kingston on the Railway the animal jumped from the Harrowsmith.

—Mr. P. Madden, who resides near Mills, killed a garter snake on Feb. 18 measured 3 1/2 feet. Thirty hours after captured the snake was found to be a rattlesnake.

—A row occurred at Mrs. Hennessy's, on Monday night last. A young man named Little, of Kingston, was stabbed in the neck and breast.

—Over three hundred pieces of toy balloons to select your spring suit from Alister's. Mr. Williamson gives unsatisfaction as a cutter.

McGregor's Speedy Cure

From the many remarkable cures wrought by McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia, Constipation and Affection of the Liver, an immense sale of it without any advertisement concluded to place it extensively on the market, so that those who suffer may have a perfect cure. T. A. Huffman and A. W. Grange's drug store will give a trial bottle free, or the regular size at one and one dollar.

Crushed by the Cars.

A little son of John Spinks, Toronto, was crushed by a G. T. R. express train, some two doctors attended him without benefit. A notice was proposed, but Hargrave's was tried, which gave prompt relief and speedy cure, even removing all stiffness of the joints.

must of necessity be closed up immediately.
Do not delay and cause trouble on both sides.

Lennox License Commissioners.

Hon. John Steyenson, John Webster, Esq., and James Daly, Esq., have been appointed License Commissioners for Lennox under the Ontario License Law. The board met on Monday and elected Hon.
John Steyenson, chairman, and Mr. Daly, secretary.

Post Office Burglarized.

Mr. Owen Robbins' store, Ameliasburg township, was broken into Thursday night
of last week and a quantity of boots and dry goods stolen. The thieves ransacked the post office, and cut open one of the mail bags,
in which they got a registered letter containing $5. They also made an attempt to blow the safe open with gunpowder, but failed. After visiting several stables they took Mr. W. C. Delong's horse, cutter, and harness, which was found under an hotel shed at Rednerville next morning.

Change of Firm.

Mrs. R. J. Perry has purchased the drug business of Dr. R. B. Clark and the business in future will be carried on under the style and name of Perry & Co. A complete line of new goods are now arriving and will be added to their present stock. They buy for cash and customers may depend on getting everything at bottom prices. Their motto is "small profits and quick returns," and by close attention to business and square dealings they hope to merit a large share of public patronage. Give them a call and be convinced.

St. Mary Magdalene's Church.

On the 23rd inst.—Midlent Sunday—a most interesting event will, for the first time in the history of the parish of Napanee, take place in this church. The Bishop of Ontario has consented to hold an ordination here,
and no doubt our English Church friends will be gratified at his Lordship's visit for such a purpose. It is hoped that on the evening of the 23rd the Bishop will accede to a request that he will deliver his second lecture on "Agnosticism," which has attracted so much attention in the Capital.

On next Sunday evening the Archdeacon purposes continuing his series of sermons on
"The Church and her Services."

Meeting of the General Committee.

At an adjourned meeting of the committee held in the town hall, Adolphustown, on the 27th ult., to make further arrangements with reference to holding a centenary celebration Mr. Parker Allison occupied the chair and Mr. J. B. Allison acted as secretary.

Mr. J. J. Watson moved, seconded by Mr. W. H. Ingersoll, that Mr. L. L. Bogart be elected President, also that Mr. A. L. Mordey, Mr. Parker Allen and Mr. D. W. Allison, M.P., be elected Vice Presidents, which was carried.

Moved by Mr. H. H. Allison, seconded by Mr. G. M. German, that Mr. S. W. Trumppour be appointed Treasurer, which was carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. P. D. Davis, and seconded by Mr. R. Derland, that Messrs. A. C. Davis, J. J. Watson, J. B. Allison and W. H. Ingersoll be appointed corresponding secretaries and that they be instructed to communicate with the Wardens and Reeves of the adjoining counties asking co-operation in the celebration movement.—Carried.

Moved by W. H. Ingersoll, that two committees be formed to present our claims for aid to the Dominion Parliament and Ontario Legislature, now in session, to erect a monument in the United Empire Loyalist burying-ground, said committees to be composed of the following persons, viz: To the Legislature—Messrs. ## 2-HORSE IRON CULTIVATORS

Are meeting with a ready and steady sale. All who use them pronounce them as a Cultivator

 The Very Model of Perfection,

And to meet the increased demand upon us we have in course of construction an extra number, so that our customers may not be dissatisfied this spring (as many were last season) in securing a Cultivator which works complete, is strong, durable and cheap.

We shall be pleased if parties who have spoken for Cultivators will take delivery at an early date and those who have not yet purchased should call at once and secure one and have it in readiness for the spring work.

REPAIRING.

We are prepared to do all kinds of repairing and job work, and will spare no pains to turn out work that will give the utmost satisfaction.

Farmers having machinery to repair should see that it is done at once, as better work can be done now than in the busy harvest season. Bring in your machines at once and have them repaired, in readiness for the harvest, at the
